Conferees Split As a New Revolt On Works Flares

Robinson Rebuke Stirs Ire of Glass

Latter Firm in Demand to Spend Third of Loans for Labor.

By Robert C. Albright.

Senate conferees on the works and relief bill weighed the wisdom of resignation last night as the House sent the jinxed $4,880,000,000 measure back to conference, throwing wide open again the whole bitter controversy.

Possibility the Senate conference committee might decline to serve longer was suggested last night by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, after Senate Majority Leader Robinson mildly rebuked them for their stand on the bill.

"I will call the Senate conferees together in the morning for two purposes," Senator Glass, chairman of the conference, said last night. "In the first place, I want to find out whether they desire to continue to serve. In view of Senator Robinson's speech, my own inclination is not to continue."

If they decide to go forward with the conference, the Virginian will sound out colleagues on Administration insistence that no labor limitations be placed on $900,000,000 in loans or grants to States.

Glass Is Adamant.

Senator Glass intimated he will not budge from his position that one-third of all money loaned be spent directly on labor. It was Secretary of Interior Ickes' loud protest against this restriction that brought about White House intervention, caused the House to recommit the bill and provoked a two-hour debate in the Senate yesterday.

Emergency relief funds, which appeared at the point of exhaustion yesterday, meantime were mysteriously tided over for another ten days, it was learned. Chairman James P. Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee, was informed that $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 more in unexpended balances will be made available by the President. Authority for continuance of Civilian Conservation Camps expired Sunday night, but the camps will be kept open.

Developments were:

The House, by a vote of 249 to 110, sent the much-controverted bill hurtling back to conference again, on the strength of Secretary of Interior Ickes' and White House protests against the labor restriction. This was considered tantamount to instructing conferees to eliminate the limitation.

House Surrender Charged.

Senator Glass declared the House "has yielded to the dictatorship" of a public executive. Taking the Senate floor, he charged "there are some officials who not only want to administrate but to legislate." Despite the fact that most Senate conferees voted against the bill, he said they fought vigorously for every Senate amendment.

Senator Glass made public a letter he wrote to Secretary Ickes, advising the public works administrator the best course would be to seek separate joint legislation, effecting the changes he favors, rather than hold up the conference report. He said Ickes placed a mistaken interpretation on the term "direct work," contained in the bill.

Ickes replied immediately. He declared himself "still of the opinion that the limiting language not only puts a premium upon waste and extravagance and reckless dissipation of public money; it practically requires that this money be so distributed."

Injecting the issue in Senate debate, Majority Leader Robinson said four of the five Senate conferees were opposed to the legislation. He said Senators sometimes refused to serve on conference committees, when they were not in sympathy with legislation involved. This was interpreted in some quarters as a

Baby Bond Sales Total $38,000,000

March Receipts Listed for U. S. Savings Issue.

Sales of United States Savings Bonds—the "baby bonds"—totaled $38,012,982 during March, an average of more than $1,000,000 daily since the bonds were offered March 1, the Treasury reported yesterday.

Since the sales figure represents the purchase price, the face value of the bonds sold amounts to more than $50,600,000. The number of buyers was said to be 70,000, averaging $503.15 in their investments.

In announcing the figures, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Thomas J. Coolidge commented that sales during the latter part of the month compared well with the first returns.

New York led the Nation with sales of $2,267,718.25. Washington was ninth, contributing $376,423 to the Treasury.

Soviet Woman Leaps 20,853 Feet in 'Chute

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 1.—Vera Fedoroffa, wife of a Red army officer, today claimed the woman's parachute jumping record after an asserted leap of 20,853 feet from a plane near Leningrad yesterday. She made the jump without oxygen apparatus.

Mme. Fedoroffa was reported to have been in the air 22 minutes after she left the plane.

"Upon jumping I turned three times in the air, then pulled the ring," Mme. Fedoroffa said. "Although my hands were nearly frozen I did not wear mittens."

"I was carried over a village and bounced on the roof of a house. The parachute then was carrying me at great speed, but this was broken by the trees through which it took me before I landed in an orchard."

Mme. Fedoroffa has a 6-year-old daughter, who, she says, is anxious to make her first jump.

Law Impelled Sale of Stock, Mellon States

Claimed Losses in Order to Pay Justifiable Levy, He Says on Stand.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 1.—Andrew W. Mellon frankly told the Board of Tax Appeals today that he sold certain stocks in 1931 to establish losses for income tax deductions in order to pay the Government what he considered a "justified and fair tax."

For more than two and a half hours, the former Secretary of the Treasury told his story of the various stock transactions which the Government has labeled as fraudulent—largely because in most instances the securities were later acquired by the Mellon family's holding companies.

Then he was turned over to the Government's chief counsel, Robert H. Jackson, for cross-examination.

Questioned on Sale.

Questioned about the sale of 123,000 shares of Pittsburgh Coal Co. stock—on which he claimed a $5,600,000 loss—Mellon said he deliberately selected this stock for sale because it represented the largest loss he could establish.

This was done, the banker testified, because of the "strange" income tax law which he said forced payment of taxes on capital stock gains. The evidence has shown Mellon made several million dollars through disposition of his 30 per cent interest in the McClintic-Marshall Corporation and other transactions.

Mellon insisted, with emphatic swings of his arms, that he knew nothing about the acquiring by the family holding concerns, the Coalesced and Ascalot companies, of securities he had sold in 1931, but he did recall that in 1933, Coalesced had bought a block of bonds he sold through a broker.

Account of Transaction.

The Government attorney went into the Pittsburgh coal transaction and brought from the witness this account:

"I wanted to avail myself of the privilege which I knew was my legal right, of establishing losses on my stock. I had had a very much larger income in 1931, than I would have in 1932, because many of my investments ceased paying dividends

Inquiry Asks More Police For District

House Group Requests Increase in Funds to Fight Crime.

And Urges Restoration of Old Second Precinct.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

An increase of 141 officers and men in the personnel of the Metropolitan Police Department to a total of 1,447, was recommended by the special House District Crime Committee yesterday.

In the same breath, the committee warned that its recommendation for increased personnel was not to be construed as an indorsement of the administration of the Police Department.

Recommendation of the committee was unanimous in a preliminary and partial report. The report marked a victory in Congress for police and District officials, who have for several years met with rebuff from the Federal Budget Bureau and the House District Appropriations sub-committee for more policemen.

Report Transmitted.

"This report," the committee said, "should not be construed as indicating any failure to recognize the necessity of the most careful consideration by the sub-committee for the broader administrative problems of the Police Department. These matters will be treated by the sub-committee in its final report."

Copy of the report was immediately transmitted by Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, in whose office the executive meeting was held, to Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate District Appropriations sub-committee, which now is considering the annual District appropriation bill for the next fiscal year.

The report, Chairman Randolph said, will be presented for action tomorrow to the full House District Committee headed by Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey.

Speedy Action Urged.

"The sub-committee," the report said, "is unanimous in its conclusion that this addition to Washington's first line of defense against crime should be provided—and at the earliest possible moment."

The committee also recommended restoration of the old Second Police Precinct, which was merged with the old Eighth Precint, a few years ago. The additional personnel recommended, it was said, would permit division of the overlarge precinct. The present precinct has more than 100,000 population. In it are committed more than 25 per cent of the felonies committed in the District, it was pointed out.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, in a letter to the crime committee, gave assurances that if the increased personnel were provided he would be enabled to restore the old Second Precinct.

Motorcycle policemen will be assigned to each precinct, under command of the precinct captains, Maj. Brown said, if Congress will provide additional men and equipment.

Approval Is Voted.

Approval of the report was voted by Representatives Randolph, William T. Schulte, of Indiana; Virginia E. Jenckes, of Indiana, and Theodore B. Werner, of South Dakota (Democrats), and Representatives Chauncey W. Reed, of Illinois; Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois; Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, and Clare G. Fenerty, of Pennsylvania (Republicans).

Representative Randolph, after the meeting, made public a statement saying the committee had made "a unanimous preliminary and partial report covering the immediate need, as the committee sees it, for an increased police personnel in Washington.

"This report will be submitted to the District of Columbia committee for action Wednesday morning and the copy of the findings of the sub-committee has been sent to Senator

Senate to Investigate Regime Of Pearson in Virgin Islands

The Senate yesterday ordered an investigation of the administration of the Virgin Islands. The inquiry will be conducted by a special committee of five Senators, authorized under a resolution presented by Chairman Tydings of the Territories Committee.

The Virgin Islands have been a political storm center since the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration. Gov. Paul Pearson has been bitterly attacked and just as strongly defended.

The move for an investigation was started last fall when Paul C. Yates, formerly administrative assistant to Pearson, asked the Territories Committee to make an investigation. He charged that the Pearson regime was "wasteful, extravagant, inefficient and tainted with corruption."

Yates, a Washington newspaper man, was appointed last summer. He said he found conditions unsatisfactory and appealed first to Gov. Pearson and then to Washington. Secretary Ickes later announced Yates' dismissal for "insubordination, disloyalty and gross inefficiency."

Gov. Pearson is a holdover from the Hoover Administration. Conditions in the islands have threatened to cause trouble in the Roosevelt Administration. The island government is under Secretary Ickes. It is reported Postmaster General Farley has been seeking Pearson's removal.

In a statement to the Associated Press at St. Thomas, the capital of the islands, Gov. Pearson said his administration "welcomes" the opportunity of showing the Senate committee "everything."

Gov. Pearson said:

"We trust that the special Senate committee will come to the Virgin Islands, where they will be heartily received.

"Our administration is pround of what has been accomplished and welcomes the opportunity of showing the Senators everything. The result of other committee visits has been to make fast friends in Washington, where at least part of the problems of the Virgin Islands must be worked out."

Gould Heiress Quits Husband And Texas Life

Anne Goes to Florida; Have Been Separated a Month, Meador Says.

By the Associated Press.

San Antonio, Tex., April 1.—Anne Gould doesn't live here any more.

She has gone to Florida, leaving behind in their modest home the young Texan, Frank Meador, who quit a ranch for Broadway and came back with the pretty New York heiress as his bride.

Sharply, the young bank employe told about it today when asked concerning their oft-rumored separation:

Meador, whose romantic early-morning elopement with Miss Gould, great-granddaughter of the railroad builder, caused a Christmas season stir in New York society, went back to his bank job and would say no more.

He promised, however, that more details would be forthcoming—later.

Meador was silent when asked if the breach was caused by his refusal to quit work at the bank, as reported, in accordance with his wife's wishes.

Stage-struck, Meador left his father's ranch near San Saba, Tex., for a try at Broadway. He played the part of the corpse in the production, "Yellow Jack.' Prior to that, however, it was revealed after the December elopement, he worked as a switchboard operator at Eli Culbertson's Crockford Club.

It was while Meador was on the stage, friends said, that Miss Gould fell in love with him.

Retrials Won By 2 Doomed In Scottsboro

Supreme Court Upholds Negro Jury Service, Hints Subterfuge.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

In one of the busiest days in this term, the United States Supreme Court yesterday handed down more than a score of opinions and rulings which profoundly affected recent legislation designed to alleviate the pressure of the depression and further defined civil and political rights in this country.

Foremost among the decisions were two granting new trials to Heywood Patterson and Clarence Norris, two of the Negroes in the so-called "Scottsboro case" sentenced to death. It was the second time the tribunal had snatched the men from the executioner's hands.

Outstanding in another field of law was an opinion by the court holding constitutional the railroad reorganization act passed in 1933 and upholding the validity of an injunction against the RFC restraining that agency from selling or disposing of collateral it held as security for loans to an insolvent railroad seeking a reorganization plan.

This latter decision represented a major defeat for the Government, whose counsel in arguing the case contended that the injunction had caused irreparable harm to the RFC. The Government contended that if the injunction in this case were upheld the value of all collateral held by the RFC and PWA for railroad loans, aggregating about $500,000,000, would be jeopardized.

Other important actions by the court were:

Lumber Case Dismissed.

Heard arguments on the constitutionality of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act, one of the most controversial New Deal measures to come before the court.

Granted the Government's motion to dismiss the NRA case against William E. Belcher, Alabama lumberman.

Ruled that the Democratic Party of Texas may legally bar Negroes from participating in party primary elections.

Held invalid an Arkansas statute extending from two to four years the period in which owners could redeem property sold for delinquent assessments to meet obligations on bonds issued by improvement districts.

Refuses Farley Case Review.

Sustained the validity of the 1932 Mississippi law providing for the reopening of insolvent State banks when 75 per cent of the depositors agreed to freezing of the deposits.

Upheld the right of the New York State superintendent of banks to bring suit in New Jersey courts to force 557 residents of the latter State who were stockholders of the defunct Bank of the United States to pay assessments levied against them under the double liability clause.

Refused to review the action of District of Columbia Supreme Court dismissing suits of the Pacific Air Transport of California to require Postmaster General James A. Farley to restore to it an airmail contract for the route between Los

Entire Office Staff of 300 Ordered Off Property in Detroit, Company Secrets Revealed in Management Fight, Says Counsel.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 1.—Officers of the Hupp Motor Car Co., who locked the plant doors to 300 office employes in what they termed a "bloodless purge," began tonight a series of conferences to determine their next step in a fight brought against the management by a stockholder.

The entire office staff was locked out of the plant this morning and ordered off the premises by company police. Many of them applied later in the day for reinstatement.

George L. Schein, general counsel for the company, said the blanket discharge order was made at his suggestion because "disloyal employes have betrayed company secrets to the opposition and the New York Stock Exchange."

Schein referred to a fight taken into Federal Court by J. Walter Drake, former chairman of the board, who seeks to oust Archie M. Andrews from the chairmanship, alleging mismanagement. Drake obtained an order Saturday restraining Andrews until April 9 from putting into effect contracts which Drake charges would injure stockholders by giving Andrews preferential bonuses, salaries and commissions. The stock exchange had ordered a hearing to determine if trading in Hupp stock should be suspended.

"So many company secrets have been so widely disseminated that a 'bloodless purge' became necessary," Schein said. "Secrets were given to Drake and to the Stock Exchange.

Drake said he had no comment to make on the lockout or his action against Andrews and five other directors of the company.

"The facts speak for themselves," he remarked.

Members of the accounting, advertising, purchasing, export and other "white collar" departments, including the engineering staff, found the company doors locked and a notice, signed by Andrews and William B. Hurlburt, his assistant, prominently displayed when they reported for work.

"All office employes, executive and otherwise, are hereby dismissed from the service of this company," the notice read. "Those employes who have been loyal to this corporation and its management in the past and who are capable of continuing to do so may make application for re-employment * * * in writing."

There were no disorders as the employes turned away. About 15 were notified by telephone later in the day to return to work, and 25 others were told to report Tuesday after they had filled out their reinstatement applications.

"We are using the vacuum cleaner," Hurlburt said. "We'll move in the new 'furniture' later."

Plant operations were not affected by the office lockout.

3-Power Warning Sent Lithuania Over Memel; Pope Pleads for Peace

Pontiff Asks United Action Of Nations to Prevent War

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Vatican City, April 1.—Pope Pius XI today called down the wrath of God against all peoples who would make war.

The Holy Father, throwing the power of the Roman Catholic Church into the cause of peace, appeared before 19 members of the sacred college of cardinals in a consistory and condemned the war-like spirit of the present troubled era.

Garbed in the sumptuous white robes of his high office, the pontiff made his warning plea while statesmen of Europe were engaged in hurried conferences in the capitals of the continent, seeking a way out of the rising arms threat, imminent in many quarters. The Holy Father observing these efforts, earnestly exhorted the statesmen of the world to join hands in working for peace.

His entry into worldly affairs came during an address to the cardinals in the Consistorial Hall, called to approve the canonization of John Fisher and Thomas More, English leaders. More was beheaded by Henry VIII in 1535, when he refused to accept that monarch as head of the church in England, and remained loyal to the papacy.

The pontiff deplored present-day tendencies toward war, declared it unthinkable that men could again take up arms, and warned:

"If anybody should commit this nefarious crime—and may the Almighty put far from us this sad forecast which we on our part believe will not come to pass—then we can not help but appeal again to almighty God with this prayer from saddened souls:

"'Confound those peoples who desire war.'

"Let this be said because of the Peace Parley Slated In Napoleonic Haven

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 1.—Statesmen of Great Britain, France and Italy will hold their conference on German rearmament April 11 in Borromeo Palace, on the beautiful islet of Isola Bella, in Lake Maggiore, it was announced today.

In this secluded spot Benito Mussolini, Sir John Simon and Pierre Laval will talk things over.

Most members of the foreign delegations, however, will stay at the Hotel Borromeo in Stresa, a few hundred yards away on the mainland.

It was at Isola Bella that Napoleon spent a long time with Josephine and his officers before his great triumph over the Austrians in the Battle of Marengo. The three statesmen will confer in a hall where Napoleon once worked.

Warning Sent by Britain, France and Italy Is Revealed.

World Court Action Seen to Settle Dispute Over Nazi Plot Charge.

The Crisis Abroad.

Tri-power warning to Lithuania indicated that the Memel territorial dispute was headed for the World Court of Justice.

Pope Pius XI called down divine wrath on those who would make war when he appeared before members of the sacred college of cardinals in Rome.

Mussolini's 1,500 planes and 7,938,000 fighting men ready for war possibilities.

Poland welcomed Capt. Anthony Eden, British envoy, who offered means to circumvent its opposition to an Eastern Locarno pact.

A charge that conquest of Ethiopia is Mussolini's aim was revealed in the Abyssinian emperor's demand for immediate arbitration of the border dispute by the League of Nations.

By the Associated Press.

Kaunas, Lithuania, April 1.—The Lithuanian government was preparing an answer tonight to the three-power warning sent by Britain, France and Italy concerning the Memel situation, quarters close to the government said.

It was stated the answer will lay all of Memel's problems on Germany.

The breach of the Memel statute referred to in the note, it was said, will be tacitly admitted, but Germany will be held responsible.

"If the statute is not functioning and if Parliament has been dismissed it is because of the violent press, radio and economic campaign Germany has been waging against the mandated territory," it was stated in these quarters.

Britain Discloses Protest.

"This campaign has made it necessary to take rigid measures for the protection of our rights."

A keen interest was expressed by officials over the revelation in the British House of Commons today by Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon that the protest had been made to Lithuania.

Geneva, April 1 (AP).—With a three-power warning to Lithuania disclosed in London dispatches it appeared likely tonight that the trouble with Germany over the mandated Memel territory is headed for the World Court of Justice.

Unconfirmed Warsaw dispatches quoting the newspaper Illustrowany Codzenny said Reichswehr and Storm Troops were being concentrated on the German frontier and that construction of fortifications was being actively pushed.

League circles were hopeful that arbitration would be instituted in view of the fact that Lithuania informed Geneva today that she will renew for five years her acceptance of compulsory arbitration in the World Court.

Note Sent March 13.

Germany adhered to this clause in 1933. Poland never adhered to it, although she is bound by court procedure under the Locarno agreements in any dispute arising out of the minority treaties.

The three-power protest to Lithuania was disclosed in London official quarters to have been made March 13 by Britain, France and Italy. Sir John Simon, the foreign secretary, told the House of Commons the joint note to the Baltic states said "the present situation in the Memel territory is incompatible with the principles of autonomy granted the territory by statute, and that it was the duty of the Lithuanian government to bring the situation to an end without delay."

The trouble arose out of the action of a Lithuanian military court in sentencing 91 Nazis convicted of

U. S. May Drop Trade Treaties Of 4 Nations

By Leon Dure, Jr.

In proclaiming the reciprocal trade agreement with Belgium, President Roosevelt yesterday sharply warned other countries that this Government will withdraw "most-favored nation" treatment where discrimination is practiced against American commerce.

Specifically, the President served notice that the United States is considering denouncing treaties or agreements with Germany, Denmark, Italy, Portugal and its colonies, which now bind this country to extending to these nations the same benefits given Belgium.

At the same time, the Senate in a burst of speed ratified two treaties which had been gathering dust in committee for years—one the treaty for obligatory arbitration among nations of the Western Hemisphere; the other an international agreement on shipping.

Effective in 30 Days.

Provisions of the Belgium agreement—the first trade pact to be completed with an industrial, European nation—become effective 30 days after its proclamation by the President and its simultaneous publication in the official Belgium gazette, the Moniteur Belge.

It was proclaimed in the face of unsettled currency conditions, caused by Belgium's recent abandonment of the "gold bloc" and devaluation of the belga by 28 per cent in terms of gold. This was a

Polish Cheers Greet Britain's Agent of Peace

Pilsudski Today Will Hear Eden Urge 2 Separate Security Pacts.

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, April 1.—Capt. Anthony Eden, Great Britain's lord privy seal and traveling salesman of peace, brought to the capital of this "buffer" country tonight Russia's and Germany's plans regarding European security, and found a cordial welcome in Poland.

Arriving by train from Moscow he was greeted by Polish authorities and the British embassy staff on the home stretch of his European pilgrimage.

It was reported Eden will convey to Marshal Joseph Pilsudski and Polish leaders tomorrow a suggestion of Russia that the Eastern Locarno pact proposal be split into Baltic and Danubian agreements.

A Polish foreign office spokesman previously had said that while Poland was opposed to the pact in its present form, any modification Eden might suggest would be listened to with interest. Poland's participation in such a pact is known to be one of Britain's chief desires.

Poland Champions Peace.

Eden said on arriving that while several years ago Britain believed only questions relating to western Europe would affect Britain today she is more and more interested in eastern Europe. It was intimated that signs of danger like the Memel trouble may make Britain fear she will be drawn into participation.

The position of Poland's statesmen generally was pictured as that of

7,938,000 Italian Fighting Men And 1,500 Planes Set for War

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 1.—Fifteen hundred military airplanes could darken Italian skies at a moment's notice in the event of war, air preparation statistics revealed today.

This is coupled with war department estimates that Italy could put an army of 7,938,000 trained men into the field, announced simultaneously with the calling of the military class of 1914 to the colors—250,000 strong.

With 600,000 men now under mobilization orders, Mussolini has taken care that his air defenses are not behind. Last year he made a special appropriation of 1,200,000,000 lire (currently $96,000,000) to assure that any attack from above be met by swift and modern air hawks. This was in addition to the regular budget appropriation.

The exact figure for available effectiveness in the air is 1,507 military planes, not including new units known to be planned.

Moreover, these planes would not be flying upon aimless adventures. They would take off from 135 up-to-the-minute airdromes in the kingdom's four aerial sectors—Milan, Padua, Rome and Bari.

Their handling in the air would be entrusted to 1,527 skilled military pilots and 1,452 specially trained subaltern officers, and groomed by some 13,000 specially trained technicians, officers and soldiers of the aviation ground corps.

In its twelfth year as a separate arm of the national defense, Italy's air corps shows definitely the aerial philosophy of its two great founders—Mussolini and Air Marshal Italo Balbo.

Italy and Marshal Balbo hold the blue ribbon for the world's greatest mass flight. Twenty-four planes flew to Chicago and back in squadron formation under Balbo's command, after two years' grooming.

Lieut. Agello, of the DeSenzano High Speed School, holds the world air speed record of 443 miles per hour; and Renato Donati, stationed at Italy's high altitude school in Centocelle, near Rome, has carved the uttermost slice of stratosphere out of the blue for the heavier-than-air machines.

Midwest G.O.P. Ready to Fight 'Hoover Group'

Comment on Planned Rally Indicates Sharp Turn From Old Guard.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 1.—A warning against continued domination of the "Hoover group" and a call for vigorous action marked comments of Midwestern Republicans today on plans for the proposed May conference here to rehabilitate their party.

Richmond C. Coburn, president of the Missouri Association of Young Republicans, said candidly that if the ten-State meeting was intended to "refoster the party's old guard, I am against it."

"I mean former President Hoover, former Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, and the whole bunch," he added.

William Allen White, Emporia, Kans., publisher who was host to the former President at his home in February, is being considered for the role of platform builder.

"A return to the humanity of Lincoln," White stressed recently as the principal necessity.

Harrison E. Spangler, national committeeman for Iowa, has emphasized that it will be a convention interested in principles, not candidates, and that no known presidential aspirants will be invited.

Plans for the conference were discussed recently at Washington by Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, himself considered G. O. P. presidential timber. He was one of few Republican Governors to buck successfully the Roosevelt landslide.

For South Vote Cut.

George Olmsted, of Des Moines, Iowa, chairman of the young Republican national committee, called for a "meeting of patriots and statesmen and not of politicians." He favors a reduction in the convention voting power of the "Southern States, that practically have no Republican Party."

Will T. Beck, Kansas Republican State chairman, wants the party to "get down to something specific."

As the Eastern Republicans have been somewhat phlegmatic or static about it," he said, "I believe the Midwestern Republicans might well take the lead."

The fact there is to be a conference was seized upon by Robert Smith, of Omaha, Nebr., former chairman of the Nebraska State central committee, as "indicative of the new spirit of interest." He said "the Republicans are getting ready to take over the leadership in the States and nationally."

Henry S. Caulfield, last Republican Governor of Missouri, said the party now "is without a national leadership" and "it is well to evolve something in that nature."

New Deal Target.

A bit of the old fire-and-brimstone was injected by State Representative Lawrence Presley, Missouri's minority floor leader. He banged his fist at the New Deal, decried "unworkable theories" and predicted the conference would prove "as a light house is to a ship in a terrible storm."

Kansas City, with memories of the 1928 convention which resulted in the Hoover nomination, is looking forward to the assembly of the 1,500 delegates.

Missouri is wet and predominantly Democratic, but only a few blocks away from the cold convention hall, where the delegates probably will meet, there lies dry and Republican Kansas.

Kansans figure prominently in the tentative set-up and the State's influence is expected to be great because of its turning back of the Democratic tides in 1932 and 1934.

Delegates are to be selected on a basis of 15 for each congressional district, giving Illinois the largest delegation.

Tentatively, Kansas would have 105 delegates; Missouri, 195; Iowa, 135; Colorado, 60; Nebraska, 75; Illinois, 375; New Mexico, 15; Michigan, 255; Indiana, 180, and Oklahoma, 120.

Plucking Relief Rabbits From The Hat; McCarl For President? The PWA Row In Atlanta.

By Raymond Clapper

On three or four occasions recently the Administration has indicated that its relief funds were about exhausted and that Congress would just simply have to get the works bill through right away.

And each time, when Congress didn't put the works bill through right away, the Administration marched back down the hill and was able to find—by some process which to the outsider looks like a magician pulling out a rabbit that he has had under his coat all the time—several more million dollars to tide over those on relief. Last Saturday they said that this time they were out of money sure enough and no foolin'. Only $4,000,000 or so was left.

Well, Monday came and Congress was in a worse mess than ever, with some of the works conferees threatening to quit in high dudgeon and further delay in prospect. But true to form, late in the day word reached congressional leaders that another chunk of money had been found lying around in some odd corner—enough to meet relief drafts for a week or so longer.

The intrepid Comptroller General, J. Raymond McCarl, is finishing up his 15-year nonrefillable term having the best time of his life. He can't be reappointed, so he doesn't have to keep everybody happy. Next to Huey Long, he probably worries the Administration more than anyone else. They can't touch him when he cracks down on expenditures.

* * * *

Senators and Representatives are drawing on him increasingly for advance opinions about ending legislation.

The Supreme Court never indicates in advance how it will rule. Congress has to pass the laws and then after something happens and lawyers knock down an honest fee by fighting through the lower courts the cases finally, after a year or so, reaches the Supreme Court and we find out whether the law is constitutional. That is unless, as in the Belcher lumber case, the Government refuses to appeal, and then we continue to hang in mid-air indefinitely, which is the status of NIRA at the moment. Nobody knows whether it is constitutional or not and the Government, fearing the worst, won't let the case go to the Supreme Court.

McCarl, however, upon request, is willing to indicate in advance how he would interpret a particular measure should it become law. More and more in the confuson here, Senators and Representatives are turning to him for help. Despite the fact that the Administration challenges his standing as the final authority for what can or cannot be done, he continues to be regarded in Congress as an arbiter whose opinions are worth obtaining.

* * * *

Though it is embarrassing to McCarl to be mentioned as a Republican presidential possibility, there are a number of factors contributing to his availability. A lawyer, born in Iowa, transplanted to Nebraska, he became secretary to Senator Norris. In 1918 he became secretary of the Republcan congressional campaign committee. In 1921 he was appointed the first Comptroller General under the budget act.

In this position he has acquired a more intimate knowledge of governmental operations than any other man. He has seen the machinery operate from the inside. It has been part of his business to know all or the tricks and to spot the ones which shouldn't get by. At the same time he has not been involved in the countless controversies of the last 15 years and is one of the few men in public life who can start with a clean slate.

His chief handicap is that he is not widely known outside of Washington. He plays golf and lives quietly. He can't run around the country making speeches advertising himself. Just the same the party could do worse than to beat a path to his door and put him up as a level-headed progressive who knows what it's all about.

PWA housing officials are still changing letters with Mayor Keys of Atlanta but they think the row will blow over now. PWA started two low-cost housing projects there. About the same time the city undertook to cut salaries in the building inspection department. Someone in the city government thought of collecting inspection fees from the Government on its housing project, using the extra revenue to avert the salary cut.

Col. Horatio Hackett, head of the PWA Housing Corporation, said the Government could not be charged such fees by the city. The City of Atlanta then threatened to declare the housing prdoject outside of the city limits, which would deprive it of sewer connections and fire department protection. Col. Hackett said the city couldn't do that either. So far the city hasn't, and there the matter rests at the moment.

After several municipal victories recently, Republicans are waking up in New England, too. National and State committeemen of six New England States are to meet at Boston April 30 to consider ways and means of coming back in 1936. This meeting will precede the Midwestern conference expected to be held in May. The New Englanders have asked a farm-belt Republican, Representative Theodore Christianson, of Minnesota, former Governor, to be the chief speaker. An odd choice, but one of the backers of the conference explained that they wanted to let the rock-ribbed Republicans see a Middle Westerner and find out what Republicans out there are like. Republican National Chairman Fletcher was invited, but couldn't make it.

Long-range seers are watching commodity prices closely now. For six weeks there has been a slow recession in the price index after reaching a four-year peak in February. The current dip may be a brief breathing spell preparatory to another climb. On the other hand, consumer resistance may be getting in its effect. Some time must elapse before anybody will be able to figure out just what is happening.

Elections Held In Four States To Show Trend

Michigan G. O. P., Illinois Democrats, LaFollette, Sinclair Get Tests.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago Democrats and Wisconsin Progressives turned to ballot boxes today as a political barometer to ascertain whether they had gained or lost strength, and in Los Angeles a municipal primary promised indication of the power of the machine fashioned by Upton Sinclair.

Meanwhile, Michigan voted yesterday in the first contest since the State went Republican last fall. The main contest was the issue between Dr. Paul F. Voelker, incumbent Democratic State superintendent of schools, who advocated a flat $25,000,000 emergency appropriation to keep the schools going and Republican M. R. Keyworth, opposing such a plan. Two university regents, circuit judges and two State Supreme Court justices also were chosen.

The Chicago Democrats, confident of naming Mayor Edward J. Kelly, concentrated on obtaining a large turnout to defeat Emil C. Wetten, Republican candidate, and Newton Jenkins, independent "third party" candidate.

While most of Wisconsin's contests were over municipal and judicial posts, the vote in 10 counties providing races for two State Senate posts and one Assembly post were regarded as giving tests of the popularity of Gov. Philip La Follette, who went into office last fall as a Progressive. The Governor took an active part in the Senate campaign.

In Los Angeles, an otherwise dull municipal primary focused attention again on Sinclair and his "epic"—"end poverty in California"—candidates. The Socialist writer who turned Democrat only to be defeated in the last Governor's race has backed a slate of candidates for municipal judgeships and the city council. A block of "epic"-indorsed candidates were elected in Los Angeles to the Legislature at the time Sinclair was defeated.

U. S. Blasts Theory Age Improves Wine

The adage "Wine improves with age" just isn't so.

This is the finding of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, which said yesterday in a statement issued by Joseph H. Choate, jr., director, that "in practically no case is quality proportional with age, younger wines of any manufacture being frequently better than older wines of the same origin and type."

The regulations prohibit any statement of age on wine labels, except in the case of vintage wine, defined as a wine made by crushed grapes of one year's crop in one area.

Miss Klein Denies She Wed Nichols

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 1—Katherne Klein, national women's skating champion, who announced today her engagement to Dr. Thomas Outland, of Sayre, Pa., denied again tonight she was wed to George Nichols, former light heavyweight boxing champion, despite his statements to the contrary.

The Buffalo Times quoted Nichols as saying by telephone from his Sandusky, Ohio, home that he and Miss Klein were married after they had obtained a license at Ripley, N. Y., October 9, 1933.

When Miss Klein announced her engagement to Outland, she said she would abandon her skating career to be a "real wife."

She returned last Wednesday from Norway after setting a world's record for the 1,00-meters and placing second in the women's world skatng championships.

Long Aid Goes On Trial on Tax Evasion Charge

Legislator Says Gambling Losses Explain Failure to File Returns.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, April 1.—State Representative Joseph Fisher, of Jefferson Parish, first of nine associates of Senator Huey P. Long called to trial on Federal income tax charges, contended through counsel today he had been in the gambling business and suffered losses he understood were deductible from his returns.

Fisher, a member of Senator Long's political machine, was placed on trial in Federal District Court before Judge Wayne G. Borah over the strenuous objection of his counsel, Hugh M. Wilkinson.

Fisher is accused on seven counts of evasion or attempting to evade or defeat the tax payments, for the years 1929-1932, inclusive, during which period the Government charged his income was about $122,000, much of which was unreported on his returns.

Rene Viosca, Federal District attorney, declared the Government would seek to show that Fisher was guilty on four counts of "wilfully attempting to evade" income tax payments, two counts for not filing returns in 1931 and 1932 and one count of assisting in preparing "a fraudulent document" in which his wife's income liability for 1932 was protested.

Attorney Wilkinson replied that the defense would show there was no willful nor criminal intent, that his client had lost in the gambling business in Jefferson Parish during the years the Government said he made no return, that these losses were deductible and that he was insolvent in 1929 and still is.

Viosca charged that Fisher had many sources of income which were not wholly reported, among them proceeds from road contracts, for shell materials allegedly carried out with the Louisiana Highway Commission at the time Gov. O. K. Allen was chairman of the commission.

Gov. Allen was summoned as a witness.

Former Gov. Dan S. Moody of Texas is leading the prosecution under appointment of Attorney General Cummings in Washington.

Bullets End Lives Of Elderly Couple

'We Have Reached the End of the Road,' Note Says.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, April 1.—Bullets ended the lives of an elderly couple who, worried by illness, police said, decided they had "reached the end of the road."

They were Willard M. Perkins, 70, former cashier of the exclusive University Club at Chicago, and his 65-year-old wife, Julia. No one heard the fatal shots. They left a note in their hotel room reading:

"Gentlemen: We have reached the end of the road. Let this be your authority for cremating our remains. Notify the University Club, Chicago, Ill. Think they will meet the expense. Respectfully, W. M. Perkins, Julia Perkins."

Mute evidence of their ill health, bottles and boxes of medicines and prescriptions, were in their hotel room.

Perkins had been employed by the Chicago club for 20 years.

2 Powers Launch Chaco Peace Move

Notes Request Aid of U. S., Peru and Brazil.

By the Associated Press.

Santiago, Chile, April 1.—Notes asking the cooperation of the United States, Peru and Brazil in an effort to settle the Chaco war were handed ambassadors of those countries tonight by Dr. Miguel Cruchaga, Chilean foreign minister.

In a similar conference at Buenos Aires, Argentina asked collaboration of the three countries in Argentine-Chilean efforts to bring peace between Paraguay and Bolivia.

Notes were presented simultaneously at 6 p. m., in the two capitals by Dr. Cruchaga and Carlos Saavedra Lamas, Argentine foreign minister, to envoys from Washington, Lima and Rio de Janeiro.

Indications were that Cruchaga and Saavedra Lamas felt they had proceeded sufficiently in their earlier soundings to proceed with a joint neutral peace effort. Their plan is based on a projected truce, guaranteed by mediatory powers.

Herd of Ibex Reported At Large in Arizona

Phoenix, Ariz., April 1 (AP).—Reports that a herd of 100 ibex inhabit the mountains near Kingman, have been made to the United States Biological Survey at Albuquerque by Mohave County officials, it was disclosed here today.

Although representatives of the Biological Survey Department declared the reports "impossible," they have agreed to send a field man to the Kingman district to see the strange animals. Ibex usually are found in Asia.

South's 'Airflow' Train To Be Called 'The Rebel'

Jackson, Miss., April 1 (AP).—Ending a controversy of several months over the selection of a name for the South's first streamlined train, I. B. Tigrett, president of the Gulf, Mobile & Northern Railroad, announced today the train will be called "The Rebel."

When that name was first proposed for the new train, scheduled to be put into service over the G. M. & N. line between Jackson, Tenn., and New Orleans, protests were received from U. D. C. and other similar organizations.

Rubber Strike, If Sanctioned, To Wait 8 Days

Goodyear Vote Disclosure Waits 2 Other Unions' Balloting in Akron.

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, April 1.—Officials of the American Federation of Labor Rubber Workers Union disclosed late today the strike they have been considering at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. will not materialize for at least eight days.

Earlier today, Sheriff James Flower had deputized 2,000 men as a precautionary measure, in the belief a strike might be called within 48 hours.

The disclosure that a walkout, if it is called, will not occur so quickly came in an announcement by John House, president of the Goodyear local.

"Loyal Workers" Deputized.

House said the result of a strike vote being taken at the Goodyear factory by the A. F. of L. union will not be announced until a count is completed of similar votes to be held next Sunday at the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. and the B. F. Goodrich Co. These will continue probably three days, he said.

Union officials said between 2,000 and 3,000 votes were cast yesterday and today in the Goodyear balloting, which will continue through tomorrow.

Most of the men deputized by Sheriff Flower are "loyal employes" of the three companies, he said, adding that they have been equipped with night sticks and tear gas and insured for $10,000 each.

Labor Board Blames Companies.

Efforts to prevent a strike at the Goodyear factory continued today here and at Washington, where Ralph Lind, secretary of the Regional Labor Board, conferred with Federal officials.

Lind said the tire companies could forestall a walkout by permitting a collective bargaining election as ordered by the National Labor Board. This, however, the companies have refused so far to do.

The three concerns employ approximately 35,000 workers, of whom the union claims 12,000 are members. Company officials say the union membership is much lower, and that a large majority of their employes do not want to strike.

The union wants from the companies recognition of the A. F. L. organization, a 30-hour week, and an agreement providing a basis for future negotiations.

U. C. V. Annual Reunion To Be Held in Texas

Nashville, April 1 (AP).—The 1935 reunion of the United Confederate Veterans will be September 3-6 at Amarillo, Tex., Gen. Harry Rene Lee, adjutant and chief of staff of the U. C. V., announced today.

After a conference with Walter L. Hopkins, of Richmond, and Carl Hinton, of Amarillo, commander and past commander, respectively, of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, Gen. Lee said "everything is settled" for the reunion. He said 1,500 veterans are expected to attend.

U. S. Purchases On RFC Loan Ended by China

N. Y. Office Closed Due to Failing Demand for Cotton, Wheat.

A decision by the Chinese government to wind up its purchases of American cotton and wheat, which it has been making with RFC credit, was announced yesterday by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Government corporation.

A $50,000,000 loan to China was authorized by the RFC in May, 1933, but only $17,105,385 of this amount was actually taken, he disclosed. About $10,000,000 went for the purchase of 159,500 bales of cotton, $6,000,000 for wheat and $1,000,000 for flour.

Dr. W. P. Wei, financial agent for China in handling the loan, has closed his New York office and departed, it was said. The reason for ending the credit arrangement was said to be a lack of demand in China for American cotton and wheat.

Under the original agreement, China pledged taxes for the loan and promised not to re-export any of its American purchases. About $2,205,000 has been repaid on the loan for cotton, but none of the wheat loan has yet matured, it was said.

Meantime, the "war scare" in Europe has prompted renewed interest in American cotton, it was learned. Russia is said to be interested in particular. Because of the Johnson act, prohibiting loans to "defaulter" nations, no RFC credit could be advanced to this country, but the money could be made available by a loan to exporters.

Roosevelt Quits Crooked Island

Stack of Mail Keeps Him Busy During Day.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., April 1.—President Roosevelt shoved off from Crooked Island at 3:15 p. m. (Eastern standard time) today and headed for Long Island, about 50 miles to the northwest in the Bahama group.

It was off Long Island that the President stopped for a day of fishing on his cruise to Puerto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands last summer.

Aside from reporting his change of location, Mr. Roosevelt was silent during the day as he attacked a stack of mail, which was carried to him yesterday. A report was expected tonight at Miami headquarters from the President.

House Threat Now Confronts Farm Licenses

Lobbyists for Distributers Block Approval of AAA Amendments.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Collapse of the Administration's program of marketing licenses was threatened yesterday.

Lobbyists for distributers of farm products "turned on the heat" and persuaded the House Agriculture Committee to withdraw a favorable report on the AAA amendments. Farm administration officials were dismayed and alarmed by the legislative maneuver.

The particular suggested amendment which caused the furor was intended to strengthen the authority of the AAA to promulgate marketing licenses. If milk distributers and other opponents have their way the requested expansion of power will not be granted.

Members disclosed the measure was approved in committee last week by a 13 to 10 vote. If two committeemen shift their allegiance the amendments probably will die in committee. It is more likely, however, that the proposed change dealing with marketing licenses will be modified and the legislation will be reported out again.

Under the controverted amendment the AAA would be specifically authorized to impose marketing licenses on processors, distributers and handlers of commodities without their consent if necessary to execute marketing agreements with farmers.

Recent adverse court decisions have riddled the milk licensing program. Before reorganizing that scheme on an interstate basis the Farm Administration wants to be sure of its ground.

New Deal agricultural planners argued they already have power to impose licenses. Nevertheless, they have complained that authority is subject to adverse interpretation and should be clarified.

Oppose Antitrust Audit.

Specifically, they objected to the existing necessity of obtaining the consent of at least 50 per cent of the processors or distributers of an industry before they can impose a marketing agreement.

The position of the AAA is that no wholesale imposition of codes is contemplated, but broader authority would serve as a club over recalcitrant farmers and distributers in their dealings with each other and with the public.

Milk distributers, packers, canners, millers and other big middlemen also were said to be violently opposed to an embryo amendment which would permit searching examination of their books and records in exchange for exemption from antitrust laws.

"Distributers," commented a committeeman friendly to the AAA, "want a veto power over all marketing agreements. With power to veto is the power of control.

"If the AAA is to be left at the mercy of the distributers in negotiating agreements under which foodstuffs are to be sold, the whole program might just as well be abandoned.

"In the past the AAA has been obstructed, delayed and litigated. AAA should have the power to find out whether profits and 'spreads' are fair."

Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, ranking Republican member of the committee, conceded distributers have been active against the measure.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury (indicated by arrow) is shown as he testified yesterday in the income tax hearing.

Sale of Stocks To Avoid Taxes Told by Mellon

Claimed Losses in Order to Pay Justifiable Levy, He Says on Stand.

and that I had made some heavy capital gain which would be taxable.

"I could have, at the time, selected enough losses to offset any or all tax that might have been due. * * * But I felt I still had an income and ought to pay a substantial tax. So I sold Pittsburgh coal * * * largely to adjust the figure and reach an amount that would be in my mind a justifiable and fair tax to pay.

Paid $647,000 in 1931.

Mellon paid $647,000 income tax in 1931. The Government assessed him $3,089,000 in taxes they claim he evaded, and penalties. Mellon countered with a demand for $139,000 as a rebate because of more than $3,000,000 in gifts upon which he had not claimed a tax deduction.

The banker's replies were given in low but distinct tone. Jackson, while questioning him, stood with one hand on the witness box.

Jackson, grim and crisp-spoken, closely questioned the 80-year-old financier regarding his failure to have his tax return notarized at the time it was signed.

Mellon was asked if it was "entirely an oversight" and replied that it was.

Has Return Notarized.

He insisted that he was of the opinion at the time the report was signed in Washington that the matter of administering the oath had been attended to in his office by the notary there. Upon learning of the omission, Mellon had the return notarized in Pittsburgh.

Three times Jackson tried to get Mellon to tell the board whether, after he learned all details of his 1931 income report, he thought it was "all right."

Each time he was blocked by objections of Frank J. Hogan, Mellon's chief counsel, who contended the report stood for itself and that the Government had no right to demand Mellon's opinion now.

Flash! An Odd Story Of Odd Cows' Demise

By the Associated Press.

St. Johns, Quebec, April 1.—Farmers here shook their heads and cocked a waggish eye at the calendar today when they heard a story from Lyndon, Vt., that a bolt of lightning streaked into the barn of Gerald Smith, deafened two horses and killed the first, third, fifth, seventh, ninth, eleventh, thirteenth and fifteenth cows in the line, leaving the even numbers standing placidly waiting for breakfast.

Smith, however, swore it was true.

Child Is Stricken Ill As Custody Is Argued

Topeka, Kans., April 1 (AP).—While little Patricia Gaylord Simpson lay ill of measles tonight, Judge Otis E. Hungate weighed evidence offered in a habeas corpus hearing brought by the child's father and maternal grandmother to have her removed from the custody of her mother.

Judge Hungate indicated he would not be ready to announce his decision before late this week or possibly next week.

Patricia, who testified in the hearing Friday as a surprise witness, complained of not feeling well the following day. Today her ailment was diagnosed as measles.

NoEgg-Rolling? First Lady Says It Can't Be So

Easter Monday Event to Be Held at White House as Usual.

The rolling of vari-colored eggs on the White House lawn, a custom that goes back to the administration of Rutherford B. Hayes, will take place again this Easter Monday.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt made this clear at her press conference yesterday when she was asked about rumors that the egg-rolling would be transferred to the Washington Monument Grounds.

Since they have been in the White House, President and Mrs. Roosevelt have enjoyed thoroughly watching the youngsters romp about the grounds with their baskets of eggs. Mrs. Roosevelt has made a practice of leaving the portico and mingling with them.

John Roosevelt Here.

Also she has always provided her grandchildren, Sistie and Buzzie Dall, with baskets of eggs. Buzzie in particular is an egg-rolling enthusiast.

The only time the custom of rolling eggs on the White House lawn has been interrupted since the Hayes regime was when President Wilson lay ill in the White House. It was resumed when Warren G. Harding took office.

While the President is fishing from Vincent Astor's yacht Nourmahal off the Florida Coast, John Roosevelt, the youngest son of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, is spending his vacation from Harvard at the White House.

Likes Art Exhibit.

Mrs. Roosevelt told the assembled newspaper women that she found "interesting" the biennial exhibition of contemporary American art now on exhibition at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. While the exhibitions showed extremes in painting, she said, she believed that the conservative and radical trends were coming closer together. She said she was particularly fond of "An Afternoon in March," a painting by Jonas Lie.

Commenting on a magazine article in which the authors said that the subsistence homestead idea would make poverty permanent in this country, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"My own idea of the way to keep such company towns developing in such a community is to have more than one industry operating there and to encourage its young people who are not tied down with buying their homes to go out and find work in private industry wherever they can do so."

Printing Pink Slips Cost U. S. $9,615

By the Associated Press.

The publicity, or "pink slip," section of the revenue act of 1934, repealed March 28, cost the Government $9,615.12 in printing charges, the Treasury reported yesterday in announcing 12,200,000 of the slips had been printed. Handling of the slips by collectors and postoffices involved an undetermined additional expense, although no extra workers were added for this purpose.

What additional revenue, if any, accrued from the publicity section of the act has not been estimated.

Officials said all pink slips returned with income tax reports, including those for 1934, would now be scrapped.

Older Woman Is Hanged, Other Is Suffocated; No Clews Found.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 1.—Two women—grandmother and granddaughter—were found slain in a humble Brooklyn home today. They had been criminally attacked.

The grandmother, Mrs. Nora Kelly, 60, hung from a beam in a basement. Her 18-year-old granddaughter, Florence McVey, lay dead on a floor.

A barking dog led Patrick Murray—Mrs. Kelly's tenant—to the gruesome discovery. He heard Mrs. Kelly's collie barking and broke into the apartment. He summoned police and 25 detectives were assigned to the case immediately.

Dr. E. H. Marten, chief medical examiner, said the couple "were unquestionably victims of a double murder." The grandmother died from a crushed chest, the physician said. He said the girl was suffocated.

However, a day of investigation left police with no evidence. Relatives of the couple could supply but little information. They said the girl visited her grandmother almost every Sunday, staying overnight with her and returning to her employment on Monday.

The girl was employed, police learned, by Mrs. Concetta Armstrong, wife of Joseph M. Armstrong of the Internal Revenue Department, as a domestic.

Miss McVey was described by her employer as a person who seldom received calls from "boy friends" or mail. She said that the girl, whom she called frail and nervous, complained of a sore throat yesterday and was allowed to leave early in the afternoon to visit her grandmother.

Inquiry Votes 141 New Police To Curb Crime

House Committee Urges Funds for District to Strengthen Force.

Thomas, chairman of the District of Columbia appropriations committee, because of that committee having under consideration at this time the question of the size of the Metropolitan Police force."

The report follows:

The sub-committee of the District of Columbia Committee, authorized by House Resolution 66 to investigate all forms of criminal activity in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, has had its attention directed to the fact that the 1936 appropriations bill for the District of Columbia is now pending before the sub-committee of the Senate on District appropriations. The sub-committe has further had its attention directed to the fact that the consideration of the bill is now in its final stages. In the light of this information, the sub-committee deems it appropriate to submit this partial and preliminary report with the thought that the findings and recommendations herein contained may be of assistance to the members of Congress in connection with their consideration of the District of Columbia appropriations bill.

"The major and superintendent of police, various inspectors, the captains of 11 precincts, the captain of the Women's Bureau, and others have testified before this sub-committee and submitted data which has led the sub-committee to the conclusion that an increase in the Metropolitan Police Department is an immediate need. The sub-committee, therefore, recommends and urges that Congress, in the District of Columbia budget for 1936, authorize and provide funds for such an increase in the membership of the Metropolitan Police Department as will bring the total strength of the department up to approximately 1447 members.

Would Restore Precinct.

"This increase is designed to restore 35 vacancies created by reductions made in 1933 and 1934 under the economy program, and to add one captain, two lieutenants, three sergeants and 100 privates.

"The additional captain, lieutenants and sergeants will make possible the reestablishment of a former precinct, which, as demonstrated by evidence before this subcommittee, is necessary to efficient law enforcement in an area now covered by Precinct No. 2, which has a population of approximately 100,000 persons, covers an area of 3½ square miles, and in which during the last fiscal year were committed 25.8 per cent of all the felonies recorded in the District of Columbia.

"Further, the recommended increase in police personnel would strengthen all precincts and bureaus which at this time are not adequately staffed. It will permit an increase in personnel in the Women's Bureau, which is particularly in need of assistance for its vitally important work. Among other improvements made possible by the adoption of this recommendation would be the assignment of motorcycle policemen to the several precincts. This is almost certain to reduce the number of traffic fatalities, and should assure a decrease in the number of automobile accidents.

Based Upon Evidence.

"This recommendation is based upon evidence before this sub-committee and the testimony of competent witnesses, each one of whom urged this sub-committee to consider favorably an increase in police personnel.

"The sub-committee is unanimous in its conclusion that this addition to Washington's first line of defense against crime should be provided—and at the earliest possible date.

"This report should not be construed as indicating any failure to recognize the necessity of the most careful consideration by the subcommittee of the broader administrative problems of the Police Department. These matters will be treated by the sub-committee in its final report."

Better Housing Poster Contest Open to Pupils

Prizes of $25 and $15 Will Be Awarded by Capital Committee.

A poster competition among senior high school students in public, private and parochial schools was inaugurated yesterday by Washington's Better Housing Campaign Committee. The committee seeks a poster that will strikingly illustrate the better housing campaign.

Two prizes will be awarded, one for $25 and another for $15. All posters, however, will be exhibited after the competition ends at 5 p. m., April 18.

Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, daughter of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, is director of the competition. She announced yesterday that copies of the rules and regulations had been distributed in all the schools.

The posters must be approximately 17 inches by 19, and in a vertical position. They must be flat and not rolled. If done on light paper, they should be mounted on cardboard. They may be executed in any medium, but not in mixed mediums. The colors will be limited to three, including black. Contestants may enter more than one poster.

On the back of ecah poster, in a panel 5 by 8 inches, the artist should put down his or her name, address, school, grade and age.

The instructions distributed in the schools contain suggestions as to slogans and explain in detail the purpose of the competition.

Plane to Be Built With Auto Motor

Tests Will Be Conducted, Vidal Announces Here.

Plans for construction of an experimental plane to be powered with a light automobile motor were announced yesterday by Eugene Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce.

One of the ships has been ordered from the Fahlin Manufacturing Co. of Marshall, Mo. Vidal stated that the performance of the little plane was expected to compare with similar type ships powered with aircraft engines, "except that the useful load must be less to compensate for the additional automobile engine weight."

Another factor is economy. An auto engine can be bought for about $150 at the present time, while aircraft engines cost nearly $1,000. Maintenance, replacement and service facilities are simpler for an auto type engine to the special aircraft design.

A group of nine prominent Washington surgeons has been selected by Dr. Ralph M. LeComte, chairman of the committee on local arrangements, for the District of Columbia-Maryland-Delaware-Virginia-West Virginia sectional meeting of the American College of Surgeons here April 11 and 12.

The committee includes Dr. E. W. Titus, secretary; Dr. James Cahill, programs; Dr. Daniel L. Borden, clinics; Dr. F. A. Reuter, publicity and education; Dr. Huron Lawson, community health meeting; Dr. William Herbst, speaker; Dr. Fred C. Schreiber, finance; Maj. Harry Bishop, Medical Corps, U. S. A., and Dr. Daniel Moffett, registration and information.

Some of the Nation's foremost surgeons are expected to participate in the sessions, which will be attended by several hundred physicians.

New Spanish Premier Named.

Madrid, April 1 (A).—Balked by political opposition, former Premier Alejandro Lerroux today abandoned his attempts to form a new Spanish government and the President named Jose Martinez de Velasco, leader of the Agrarian Party, as premier.

COOLAINE

Forstmann's Crisp, New Summer Wear Woolen

A real inspiration, you will agree—if you spend even part of the late Spring and Summer in Washington—for Coolaine provides the very lightweight woolen coat you have so often yearned to possess. Add to that, its steadfast resistance to wrinkles, to heat, and to moisture—the perfection with which it tailors—its smart, nubby weave—and the delightful pastels and mixtures in which it is available—and hail it as a truly important contribution to your warm weather wardrobe.

We sketch one of the dashing swagger styles, cut very full, with free flaring back—and showing mandarin influence in its high buttoning neckline. And, like so many Spring 1935 swaggers, it has a formal feeling, refusing to limit its usefulness to sportswear. In misses' and women's sizes.

Supreme Court Spikes Battle For NRA Test

Belcher Lumber Appeal Is Dismissed at Urge of Cummings.

By Felix Bruner.

The Supreme Court yesterday granted the Government's request for withdrawal of the Belcher lumber code case, thus ending possibility of obtaining a final ruling on constitutionality of the national industrial recovery act before next fall.

With a score of adverse decisions in as many Federal courts, Congress now is faced with the problem of continuing NRA for another two years in the face of its questioned validity.

The ruling came a short time after resolutions were introduced in the House and in the Senate "urging and requesting" Attorney General Cummings to push prosecution of the case. In the Senate the resolution was introduced by Senators Clark (Democrat), Missouri, and Hastings (Republican), Delaware, both members of the Finance Committee, which is conducting an inquiry into the operation of NRA. The House resolution was presented by Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts.

An attempt by the Lumber Code Authority to intervene in the case in an effort to prevent its dismissal was blocked by Chief Justice Hughes, who declined to hear the Authority's petition.

Textile Workers Up in Arms.

The case originally was brought against William E. Belcher, of Alabama on a charge of violating provisions of the lumber code. Judge William I. Grubb ruled that the code was invalid and the recovery act unconstitutional. On the Government's motion, the case was appealed directly from the District court to the Supreme Court.

Last week, after a series of conferences, the Justice Department announced it would ask for dismissal of the appeal. It was explained that the Government did not wish to defend the lumber code, which NRA officials agreed was defective. At the same time it was stated that other cases would be pushed on appeal.

Meanwhile, Recovery Administration officials were watching developments in threatened labor troubles. With the threatened mine strike at least postponed, trouble still was brewing in the rubber, automobile and textile industries.

Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers of America, sent a strong letter to President Roosevelt and members of Congress protesting the recent NRA order curtailing textile production 25 per cent.

Warns of $8 Wages.

Gorman declared that the order created a condition "which violates every principle of the recovery program."

"It will cut wages 25 per cent, reducing the present average wage from about $12 per week to about $9 per week," he said. "It will reduce employment that much or more."

Gorman said the union had proposed a complete shutdown for one month as preferable to the curtailment program, the month to be used in joint study to find a permanent operating program.

"We have proposed Government subsidies to retire obsolete machinery and thus permanently reduce production capacity," he continued. "But management, haughty and autocratic, defies the recovery act and defies the union.

"Next Strike More Bitter."

"I am not conveying any threat of immediate strike, but I know that if these conditions continue a strike must come at a not far distant date. It is perfectly clear to me that the next strike, when it comes, will be much more bitter than the last, and that it will not end until one side or the other is completely beaten."

Gorman proposed the following program:

"A thorough and merciless investigation of this industry, its capital structure and its methods of operation and selling.

"Compulsory abolition of obsolete machinery.

"A 30-hour week.

"Drastically increased rates of pay, elimination of the North-South differential and a restoration of the differentials between minimum rates and skilled rates to their pre-code ratio.

New Code Proposed.

"Imposition of a new code, with labor sitting in equal numbers with employers on the code authority and all subordinate boards.

"A joint Government-labor-management study of marketing and market extension.

"Mandatory recognition of the union wherever the union can show a majority in membership by secret ballot or by union books.

"Immediate action by the Department of Justice to punish those who violate Textile Labor Relations Board orders or National Labor Relations Board orders."

The Textile Labor Relations Board in the meantime was hearing complaints of union workers at the Callaway Mills, LaGrange, Ga. The mills were charged in the workers' complaint with violation of the code by installation of the "stretch-out," denial of collective bargaining and discriminating against union employes. The workers' case will be completed before the management submits its answer.

Price Fixing Charged.

The Senate Finance Committee, in spite of the legal difficulties involving NRA, continued its hearings. It received a report from Harry A. Babcock, Federal Trade Commission attorney, charging price fixing by members of the Rubber Manufactures Association.

Babcock, Federal Trade Commission the price-fixing agreement was entered into before the code became effective but that it was perfected under NRA.

Babcock was preceded on the stand by Joseph W. Nicholson, Milwaukee purchasing agent, who said his city had been unable to obtain competitive bids on rubber hose. He said one bidder, whose offer was lower than the others, had been unable to obtain the hose to deliver. He said Milwaukee had received identical bids on a number of other products.

Babcock said the Federal Trade Commission had investigated the fire hose charges. He said New York had repeatedly rejected identical bids for hose. Babcock submitted to the commission a report he had made to the Federal Trade Commission, in which it was recommended that a formal complaint charging violation of the antitrust laws be entered against the Rubber Manufacturers Association, the code authority, the mechanical division code authority and three rubber company officials.

NRA "Colors" Facts, Is Charge.

Albert J. Hettinger, secretary of the Durable Goods Industries and a former member of the NRA research and planning staff, charged that NRA had been giving out "colored evidence" on its operations.

At NRA headquarters the first personnel revision since Donald R. Richberg was named chairman of the board was announced. Prentiss L. Coonley was named code administration director succeeding D. M. Nelson, who will continue as assistant to the chairman. M. D. Vincent was appointed acting division administrator for the texile division, in place of Coonley. The place left vacant by Vincent has not been filled.

Scottsboro Pair Win Retrials; Justices Uphold Negro Jurors

Colored Residents Must Not Be Barred From Service by Subterfuge, Supreme Court Holds; New Indictments to Be Speeded.

Laying down in sharp language a ruling that Negroes can not be barred from jury service by subterfuge, the United States Supreme Court yesterday directed new trials for two of the seven Negroes recently convicted of assaulting two white women in the so-called "Scottsboro case."

In no uncertain terms the court directed the State of Alabama not only to re-try Clarence Norris but held that the indictment on which he was brought to trial was defective. Consequently a new indictment must be returned if Alabama wishes to prosecute the men. The Supreme Court held he had been deprived of constitutional rights because Negroes were barred from jury service in Alabama.

Haywood Patterson, another of the Scottsboro defendants, inferentially was given a new trial, although his case was decided by the Supreme Court on technical grounds. The case was remanded back to the Albama appellate courts to decide whether he had been fairly tried. But since he was indicted and convicted under the same circumstances as Norris, he likewise is believed entitled to a new trial.

Spared Second Time.

The Supreme Court's action yesterday marked the second time that tribunal had removed the two men from the shadow of the electric chair. Patterson on a third occasion was saved from the death penalty by a trial judge who set saide his conviction as being against the weight of the evidence.

For four years these Negroes, assisted by lawyers employed by the International Labor Defense fund, have resisted the efforts of Alabama to punish them for an alleged assault on two white women in a freight car near Scottsboro. The case has become as celebrated as that of Sacco and Vanzetti in Massachusetts and as that of Tom Mooney in California.

Lieut. Gov. Thomas E. Knight of Alabama, who as State attorney general prosecuted the Scottsboro case, last night told the Associated Press that new indictments against the Negroes would be sought immediately. He said the case would be prosecuted "to the end," pointing out that approximately 90 jurors have concurred in judging the men guilty.

Calls it "Body Blow."

The United Press reported that Circuit Solicitor H. G. Bailey, one of the prosecutors in the case, had described the Supreme Court decision as "a body blow" to Southern State courts. He said the decision may have the effect of forcing jury commissioners to place Negroes on juries regardless of their qualifications.

Samuel S. Leibowitz, New York attorney, who argued the Norris and Patterson cases before the Supreme Court, asserted he was "thrilled beyond words" at the verdict, adding that he would fight for the freedom of these boys until hell freezes over, because they are innocent."

The International Labor Defense issued a statement last night contending that yesterday's decision was "the first great victory ever obtained to offset the Dred Scott decisions." The organization stated it would move to have the men released at once on writs of habeas corpus.

Gir. Repudiated Testimony.

Originaliy the defendants in the Scottsboro case numbered nine, but at the first trial one was acquitted and a second Negro was handed over to the juvenile court because of his youth. The nine were indicted in March, 1931, on charges of assaulting Victoria Price and Ruby Bates, two white women "hoboing" their way home on a freight train. The Negroes denied the alleged assault, contending the charge was "framed up" after they became embroiled in a fight with a group of white men riding the freight.

Both women testified against the Negroes at their first trial. Ruby Bates, after a disappearance of some weeks, reappeared with the explanation that her conscience had been bothering her. She repudiated at the second trial of the men her previous testimony.

The Supreme Court set aside the first convictions of the Negroes on the ground that they had not been permitted to consult with counsel in the preparation of their defense. When the men were re-tried their case was removed from Jackson County to Morgan County.

Attorneys for the Negroes at the outset of the trial moved to quash the indictment on the grouud that Negroes were barred from sitting on the grand jury. It also was contended that Negroes were barred from trial juries in Morgan County. On both points the State courts overruled the defendents and the case of Norris and Paterson was taken to the Supreme Court

Name List Questioned.

Speaking in sharply enunciated words for the court, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes reviewed the circumstances regarding jury service by Negroes. He pointed out that it appeared from the evidence that "no Negro had served on any grand or petit jury in that (Jackson) county within the memory of witnesses who had lived there all their lives."

He pointed out there were 2,688 Negroes in the county and that at least 30, comprising members of school boards or trustees of colored schools and property owners and householders, were clearly qualified for jury service. The Chief Justice questioned the genuineness of names of Negroes appearing on jury lists. He cited testimony that the names might have been added since the issue was raised.

"We are of the opinion," the Chief Justice asserted, "that the evidence required a different result from that reached in the State court. We think that the evidence that for a generation or longer no Negro had been called for service on any jury in Jackson County, that there were Negroes qualified for jury service, that according to the practice of the jury commission their names would normally appear on the preliminary list of male citizens of the requisite age but that no names of Negroes were placed on the jury roll and the testimony with respect to lack of consideration of qualifications of Negroes, established the discrimination which the Constitution forbids. The motion to quash the indictment upon that ground should have been granted."

The court made a similar finding regarding the trial jury in Morgan County, contending that the constitutional requirement that Negroes be admitted to jury service can not be satisfied by mere assertions that colored persons have been considered as prospective jurors. The opinion held it was "a violent" assumption that no Negroes were qualified for jury service.

Landlord Named In $70,000 Suit

J. M. Mears, Shot in Scuffle, Seeks Damages.

John M. Mears, shot during a scuffle with his landlord who was atttempting to eject him, yesterday filed suit against Henry P. Parrish, who conducted a rooming house in the 800 block of Nineteenth street northwest, asking $70,000 damages.

Mears was shot January 1 when Parrish, a Government employe, returned from a trip and asked him to leave the rooming house. He recovered after several weeks in a hospital.

Parrish was convicted last week of assault with a dangerous weapon, and is now in the District Jail awaiting sentence. The jury recommended leniency.

Mears' suit, filed by Attorney Max Miller, seeks $50,000 actual damage and $20,000 punitive damage.

Plan to Reorganize Racquet Club Approved

A plan for the financial reorganization of the Racquet Club that will enable the club to maintain possession of the building at 1135 Sixteenth street northwest was approved by Justice Joseph W. Cox in the District Supreme Court yesterday and will be put into operation as soon as minor details are ironed out.

The plan, drawn up by Spencer Gordon, attorney for the club, contemplates that the present owners of the club, who bought it for $150,000 in 1934 as the representatives of about 95 per cent of the first trust bondholders, will cancel the purchase and will execute a new deed of trust to cover the $575,000 bonded indebtedness.

Holders of bonds will be given new bonds at par.

Stay Given in Gas Case.

Deferred a ruling on the constitutionality of the railroad retirement act.

Granted a temporary stay of the order of the West Virginia Public Service Commission issued last December reducing the rates of the Natural Gas Co. of Wheeling and Benwood and arguments on the case were advanced to the week of April 29.

The case in which the Supreme Court decided against the RFC centered around the insolvency of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, which on June 7, 1933, filed a petition seeking a reorganization in the Federal District Court for Northern Illinois.

Prior to that time the RFC had loaned $13,659,877 to the Rock Island, secured by collateral in the face value of $41,702,465. Five banks, including the Chase National of New York and the Continental Illinois Trust Co. of Chicago, had loaned an aggregate of $4,125,000 to the carrier, secured by collateral of the face value of $14,409,000. Each of the collateral notes provided that it should become due on nonpayment of interest; insolvency of the debtor or appointment of a receiver for the debtor.

Case Arose in 1933.

All the notes further specified that upon default of any kind the RFC or the banks, as the case might be, might sell all or any of the security held for the payment of the note, at public or prviate sale, without notice.

In September, 1933, the Rock Island appealed to the Federal court to restrain the sale of the collateral held by the RFC and the banks, contending that such action if it occurred would cause a substantial and irreparable loss to the trust estate. The court, on the ground of preserving the railroad's assets, issued the injunction and this action was aproved by the Circuit Court of Appeals.

The banks attacked the constitutionality of the reorganization act and the court first disposed of this question, holding that passage of that act was within the power of Congress in providing the country with uniform bankruptcy laws.

Turning to the right of the court to restrain disposition of the collateral, Justice Sutherland, speaking for the tribunal, held that the purpose of the law was to provide a method for reorganization of insolvent railroads and "to prevent the attainment of that object is to defeat the very end the accomplishment of which was the sole aim of the section and thereby to render its provisions futile."

Consequently he held that in granting the injunction the court "was well within its power," adding that the injunction did not impair the lien or disturb the preferred rank of the pledges. He said "it does no more than suspend the enforcement of the lien by a sale of the collateral pending further action."

Up to Court's Discretion.

"It may be, as suggested, that during the period of restraint the collateral will decline in value," he asserted, "but the same may be said in respect of an injunction against the sale of real estate upon foreclosure of a mortgage) and such an injunction may issue in an ordinary proceeding in bankruptcy."

Justice Sutherland pointed out that "a claim that injurious consequences will result to the pledgee or the mortgagee may not, of course, be disregarded by the District court; but it presents a question addressed not to the power of the court but to its discretion—a matter not subject to the interference of an appellate court unless such discretion be improvidently exercised."

He held that the lower court had justification to exercise its discretion since "the menace of impending sales of the collateral would seriously embarrass and probably prevent the formulation and consummation of a plan of reorganization."

Taking up the RFC's contention that the injunction if left in force would result "in irreparable loss," the court cautioned that it did not expect the restraining order to remain in force indefinitely or even until a plan of reorganization is consumated. The injunction may be dissolved at any time on application and after hearing, contemplating "only reasonable delay" in disposing of the collateral. The lower court was urged to speed the reorganization proceedings.

Statutes Held Invalid.

In the Arkansas moratorium case the court held invalid three statutes which it held "made over the whole plan to enforce the payment of assessments" in such a way that the property owner "has every incentive to refuse to pay a dollar, either for interest or for principal."

Comparing its conclusion in this case with that upholding the validity of the Minnesota moratorium case, the court pointed out that under the latter statute, in effect only temporarily, the granting of relief was subjected to prescribed conditions. In the Arkansas case "none of these restrictions nor anything approaching them is present," the court ruled.

In upholding the right of the Democratic Party to bar colored voters from its membership, the Supreme Court appeared to have given Southern States a device by which the Negro may be legally disfranchised—since the Democratic primary usually settles the election.

Negro Voting Right Upheld.

The case came before the court on appeal from the Texas courts on petition of R. R. Grovey, a 44-year-old Harris County, Tex., Negro, who complained that although he was qualified under State laws to vote, he was refused a ballot in July, 1934, to vote in a Democratic primary by Albert Townsend, county clerk. Townsend took such action because the State Democratic Party by resolution had limited its membership to white persons.

The court held that "we hold the party was a voluntary association and was competent to decide its membership." The court held, however, that the State could not deny a Negro the right to vote in a general election because of his race. Twice before the court has declared unconstitutional Texas statutes seeking to disfranchise Negroes.

John W. Davis, former Democratic presidential candidate, assailed the Frazier-Lemke act as "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable." Arguments in favor of the validity of the act were delivered by one of its sponsors, Representative Lemke (Republican), of North Dakota, and by Harry H. Peterson, Minnesota attorney general. Both held that the act provided necessary and reasonable relief to debt-burdened farmers.

Works Revolt Flares Again On Capitol Hill

Senate Conferees Ponder Resignation as House Recommits Bill.

subtle suggestion that Senate conferees either remove the labor limitation or permit appointment of new conferees.

Although it appeared the bill was heading into another bad deadlock, Representative Buchanan, chairman of the House conferees, scouted this view last night.

"I don't believe this going to cause any protracted delay," Buchanan said. "In my opinion, we still can get this bill through in less than a week. If it seems to me it is going to take longer than that, I myself am going to ask that a disagreement be reported to the House, and new conferees be appointed."

In bringing the matter to the attention of the Senate, Robinson referred not only to the one-third direct labor requirement on all loans made to States and localities, but also criticized a conference provision that all works administrative officers, Federal and local, be confirmed by the Senate.

The White House is said to be opposed to this provision, which might force a confirmation fight on Secretary Ickes, Relief Administrator Hopkins, Undersecretary of Agriculture Tugwell, or any other officials designated by the President to direct the program.

"Direct Relief" Causes Rift.

Sharp differences developed between Robinson and Glass over interpretation of the language "direct relief." Senator Glass cited an informal opinion of the Comptroller General in support of his stand that it would cover work on materials used on a project, while Robinson insisted it meant only "labor used on the site," and that such an interpretation would bar slum clearance and rural electrification projects.

"Is this a work relief bill, or not?" shouted Glass, aroused. "How do you expect these houses to be built—by labor, or magic?"

Glass said the fact that "some people" want to use this money to buy operating power and gas plants and "on projects that would not put to work a single human being."

In his letter to Ickes, Glass said: "Apparently you do not agree with this clear legislative purpose (work relief), but feel that public money should be made available first, for any social revision, or upheaval determined upon by those selected to administer the legislation, and second, for such employment as their social and economic program may permit.

Ickes replied that his own choice of words was unfortunate if it led the Senator to believe money would be used for "any social revision or upheaval." He said he was referring only to social projects of a type already undertaken by PWA, such as school buildings, waterworks, bridges, hospitals, public buildings, etc. He said he believed only a small proportion of the works money should be used for the purchase of property.

President Draws Rebuke.

Huey Long took advantage of the Senate debate to launch a new attack on the Administration, while Republicans on the other side of the Capitol roundly criticized the President for leaving Washington at so critical a time to go on a fishing trip.

Long said Glass had saved the President's works bill by defeating the McCarran prevailing-wage amendment, and the Administration "showing its gratitude by hanging him, along with the rest of us."

During noisy House debate on the move to recommit the works conference report, Minority Leader Snell was greeted with Democratic hisses when he personally assailed the President.

"It seems to me the President is more interested in having a good time on a palatial yacht * * *," he said.

A cry of "shame on you," came from Representative Clifton Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, as Snell shouted:

"I mean what I say."

"It seems to me Congress has reached a pretty low ebb if it can not pass a conference report without getting its orders from the Chief Executive and the brain trust," Snell concluded.

Ethiopia Sees Conquest Aim Of Mussolini

Warlike Intention Charged in Appeal to League for Arbitration.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, April 1.—Emperor Haile Selassie's urgent appeal to the League of Nations for immediate arbitration of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute was revealed today as a virtual charge that Italy intends to dominate the Ethiopian Empire.

Emphasizing that the Italian press had announced this as the final aim of that country in Africa, Ethiopia proposed a time limit of 30 days, to be agreed to by the Italian government, during which appointed negotiators should conduct arbitration at Geneva, Paris or London, to agree upon procedure.

The note asked for a direct agreement to arbitrate, but insisted that if the two countries do not agree, then the league council must take up the burden. League circles expressed the belief that the Ethiopian move was one of diplomatic aggression, since it is well known in Addis Ababa that Mussolini does not want the league intervene in the dispute.

Ethiopia Uneasy.

"It should be expressly agreed," said the Ethiopian note, "that during the whole period of negotiations and during the procedure of arbitration, the two governments will undertake not to make any military preparations or any concentration of troops and not to take any steps which might reasonably be regarded as military preparation.

"The decision of the arbitrators once pronounced will be final; the two governments will undertake to conform scrupulously thereto in all its parts, including moral and pecuniary reparations due to either side."

The note said Ethiopia was uneasy over Italian mobilization in the neighboring Italian colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland and pointed out that the Italian press had published communiques which left no room for doubt regarding the reality of mobilization.

Charges Against Italy.

"Coming from a country in which the press is inspired by the government and publishes nothing which has not been approved by the government," said the note, "such statements form a commentary on the dispatch of troops and materials of war."

The note contended Ethiopia never had taken any measures to threaten the safety of the Italian colonies. It said numerous notes addressed to Italy, far from manifesting aggressive intentions, afforded certain proof of the Ethiopian government's pacific intentions.

It charged Italy with having made reparations demands couched in imperative terms "without even permitting a previous investigation of responsibility."

The African empire declined to accept the hint from the league that she drop her appeal under article 15 of the covenant.

The Center of a New European Crisis

U. S. Gives Warning On Trade Treaties

complication not figured by framers of the pact and officials were loath to predict what the effect will be.

They pointed out, however, that the treaty contains a provision authorizing either country to propose negotiations for modification of the agreement, or to terminate it altogether on 30 days' notice, in the event a "wide variation" in currency exchange upsets the balance of the agreement.

Agrees to Cut Duties.

Under the treaty, the United States agrees to reduce duties on 47 products imported from Belgium, while that government, in turn, agrees to lower tariffs on 22 American products. The concessions given Belgium, under the "most-favored-Nation" policy, at once apply to all other countries.

In formally putting the pact into effect, however, Mr. Roosevelt took occasion to single out Germany, Denmark, Italy, Portugal, Canada, The Netherlands (and its colonies), Spain, Switzerland and Liechtenstein, for special attention.

He wrote Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, in a letter made public by the State Department, to grant the Belgium benefits to the latter-named countries (Canada, The Netherlands, Spain, Switzerland and Liechtenstein—for only a six months' period.

These five countries, the State Department explained, while now discriminating against American trade, are negotiating trade agreements with this country. If the pacts are successfully concluded, they will be given most-favored-nation treatment, but otherwise this privilege will be withdrawn.

In the case of Germany, Denmark, Italy and Portugal, however, the President instructed Mr. Morgenthau to extend the minimum duties for only a 30-day period after existing agreements providing most-favored-nation concessions are terminated.

Concerning this group, the State Department elaborated, "it is expected that notices of termination of existing treaties or agreements will be given, in accordance with their terms, with a view of clearing the way to the conclusion of agreements covering explicitly both modern and old trade control measures."

After dividing the first countries mentioned into two groups, Mr. Roosevelt listed in his leter to Mr. Morgenthau 64 other nations which, he said, should be accorded "most-favored-nation" treatment.

impossibility of any new war whatsoever.

"The physical and material impossibility of war in these actual grave circumstances appears manifest to us, as to many others.

Pleads for Faith.

"In this present situation, in the anguish and sadness of these times which cause us to fear a future still sadder, let us place our faith in God to guide those whose hands hold the destiny of government and peoples."

The holy father's concern over war-like gestures rising in Europe was manifest throughout the address.

"Reports of war," he told the cardinals, "universally spread, arouse in everyone the greatest fear. Meanwhile, we believe it opportune to take this way as the apostolic office entrusted to us seems to require.

"We consider it would be a horrible crime, a foolish manifestation of wrath, if peoples again took arms one against the other to spill blood, brothers against brothers, so that destruction and ruin would be sown from the skies, on land and at sea.

Cites Juridical Maxim.

"Now we consider this absolutely impossible according to the juridical maxim:

"'Things which are against the right can neither come to pass nor be believed.'

"We can not convince ourselves that those to whose hearts the prosperity and welfare of peoples must be close, can desire to excite souls to slaughter, ruin and devastation—not only their own nations but a great part of humanity."

The remainder of his allocution was devoted to confirmation of More and Fisher as saints in the Catholic church.

The appointment of Mgr. Joseph Francis Rummel, Bishop of Omaha, as Archbishop of New Orleans, was confirmed at the consistory.

Appointment of Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli to be camerlengo of the Catholic church also was confirmed. He succeeds the late Cardinal Gasparri. The camerlengo governs the church in the interval between the death of the Pope and election by the cardinals of his successor.

Cheers Greet British Peace Envoy In Warsaw to Urge Security Pact

champions of peace and status quo.

The aged Marshal Pilsudski, war minister and virtual dictator of Poland, will take the lead in the conversations, with Foreign Minister Joseph Beck assuming an active role. Pilsudski was represented as seeing in the Eden visit and its Stresa sequel an opportunity to weld a Polish foreign policy that he can bequeath to his political heirs.

In one quarter it was declared that the marshal, who has suffered for many months with a kidney ailment and the after-effects of his imprisonment many years ago, believes that one gap still remaining in his foreign program is in relations with Lithuania, where he has strong personal ties.

Wary of Entaglements.

Whether this point will be raised in the British-Polish conversations along with the Eastern pact, armaments, and the German-Russian-Polish triangle remained a matter of conjecture, but it was pointed out that Poland probably will take the viewpoint that "When Lithuania is friend, Poland will offer her friendship."

A spokesman of the foreign office emphasized that Eden's visit is exploratory in nature and that Poland has not changed her official view to the point of making demands.

Various observers stressed the importance of Poland's position as a kind of buffer State between Russia and Germany, and her convictions favoring a series of bilateral pacts and sufficient independence of international ties so as to be able to devote energy to consolidating the domestic situation.

Keen interest was displayed in a possible modification of the Eastern pact, although it was agreed that as it stands Poland is wary of the "entanglements" it involves.

Want Adequate Fleet.

Poland was represented as contemptous of reports she was willing to exchange Pomorze (the Polish corridor) for Lithuania. "That is ridiculous," said a foreign office official. "Status quo in Pomorze is our big concern. We are sincere in our thirst for peace. We have a real interest in Danzig, but we are satisfied with the present state of affairs there because German leaders in the free city cooperate with us."

Poland is eyeing with some suspicion the probable German intentions wtih regard to an enlarged navy and the Baltic states. Questions at the foreign office on these points elicited the reply that the Baltics are more Britain's concern than Poland's, and that "we desire a Polish fleet of such proportions that we can protect our approximately 100 miles of shoreline."

Germany's rearmament, however, was described as an expected event and scarcely surprising to Poland.

A foreign office spokesman placed the size of the Polish army at about 250,000 men, although unofficial estimates have mentioned 600,000.

eyes, was described by a foreign office attache as "something not involving Poland intimately, but nevertheless too close to home to be comfortable."

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 1.—The "beginning of a serious rapprochement between Soviet Russia and Great Britain" was seen today by the government newspaper Izvestia as the result of the just-concluded talks between Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, and Soviet officials.

The Soviet press in general said Russia was satisfied with the results of the talks, characterizing them as "very important."

Capt. Eden left Russia today on his way to Warsaw, and conversations with Polish leaders. As his train passed the Soviet frontier, the British envoy was paid farewell honors by Soviet officials.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda said: "The absence of any disagreement on the question of collective security is a very good symptom and will have effective consequences."

Izvestia declared that a security pact, once formulated, will remain open for a later signature by powers which previously have dcelined to take part.

"After this pact is concluded," said Izvestia, "the Soviet government, as now, will not wage a hostile policy against anybody."

Pravda continued accusations that Germany was planning a revenge on France and other countries, besides Russia, saying: "The present German leaders are following in the steps of Kaiser Wilhelm II. Their main interest now is to avert the union of other countries which may prevent this revenge."

Pravda claimed that Reichsfuehrer Hitler used the Berlin negotiations with Capt. Eden and Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, as a maneuver to guarantee that Great Britain would remain neutral, adding, "but the move failed."

Sentiment in England For Security Pact Gains

By the Associated Press.

London, April 1.—A distinct strengthening of opinion in government quarters that Britain should take an active part in a European security system instead of simply promoting and underwriting it was noted tonight in diplomatic circles.

This was largely owing to the outcome of the Berlin conversations and Capt. Anthony Eden's reports of the Moscow visit. Both these events have brought more than ever into bold relief the position in which Britain now finds itself—at the crossroads of isolation or active participation in continental affairs.

It was unofficially admitted that collaboration is a real possibility, although it will be necessary to move slowly for a long time until the force of all public opinion is behind the government, one spokesman said.

Eden was much impressed by Russia's peaceful intentions, officials said.

The government was watching Eden's meeting with Marshal Joseph Pilsudski with great interest, hoping he will be able to bring Poland into an eastern European pact even if Germany does not join.

France Moves to Match Germany's Air Force

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 1.—A bill to increase the efficiency of the French air force passed the Chamber of Deputies tonight without a record vote after Gen. Victor Denain, air minister, had told of his plans for accelerating the building program to give France a fleet the equal of Germany's by the end of 1935.

Gen. Denain outlined a program that would include 1,000 first-line war planes to match Gen. Herman Wilhelm Goering's new corps in Germany, reported to aim at a total of 1,800 planes.

The deputies already had voted an air program involving 1,500,000,000 francs ($775,000,000), and are expected to grant an additional 1,500,000,000 when the chamber meets again.

The bill makes the air corps completely independent of the army and navy for the first time since 1929 and lowers the retirement age by five years, quickening the advancement of young men in the service.

Jean Renaitour, the reporter for the bill, told the deputies that French pursuit planes were still too slow to catch some of the modern bombers, but there was still time for France to catch up with Germany.

Study In Contrasts.

On March 30, with three-quarters of the fiscal year behind us, the United States Treasury reported a deficit of $2,193,000,000. On the same day the British Treasury announced that it had ended its fiscal year with a surplus of £7,562,000. This is a smaller surplus than that reported for the preceding year, but it has been achieved in face of a reduction in taxes.

According to the theory that uncovered governmental expenditure puts money into circulation and aids business, the United States ought to be the envy of the British. Instead, the latter are congratulating themselves upon the improvement that has occurred in their own country. Some of them are even benighted enough to believe that the strong financial position of the Treasury has been a factor in accelerating economic recovery.

Of course invidious comparisons suggested by the experiences of the United States and Great Britain can not be taken too seriously. Conditions here and there differ in many important respects. Furthermore, occasional pessimistic reports from British sources suggest that recovery in that country may not be as widespread or as lasting as some envious Americans suppose. Nevertheless, decided gains have occurred, while the painful process of balancing the budget has been in progress. Revenues have exceeded expectations, and returns from the income tax alone have been almost as large as during the preceding year, despite a reduction in the standard tax rate.

All things considered, therefore, confirmed believers in spending as a cure for depression might well contemplate the lesson of British experience.

Not So Essential.

As the result of an amendment to the work-relief bill providing that money shall not be spent for munitions and military equipment, the $405,000,000 army modernization plan, which was to have been financed from relief funds, will probably be abandoned.

Although this proposal was enthusiastically indorsed as a means of raising the physical equipment of the Army and increasing its fighting efficiency, such arguments appear to have lost force under the changed conditions. Since the regular appropriation bill for the War Department is one of the largest ever passed by Congress in times of peace, a decision to drop the additional modernization program creates a strong suspicion that it is less important than was alleged, and not essential to safety even in these critical times.

As a matter of fact, the Army, like most governmental departments, is eager to obtain its share of all public funds not specifically allocated to other uses. Every public spending agency can display great ingenuity in devising new ways of getting rid of taxpayers' money. For that reason a blanket appropriation measure authorizing the expenditure of several billion dollars is inevitably regarded as a grab bag into which all feel privileged, even bound, to dip.

So it is not surprising to learn that the War Department has suddenly discovered that its modernization program can wait, if funds to finance it have to be taken from the regular appropriation.

"Paradise Enow?"

A reviving interest in the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam is taken as symptomatic of the depression. Critics who said America wanted romantic novels for escape from economic turmoil now declare that America, become too weary for robust religion and energetic ethics, is declining on the Persian poet best known in this country through the "translation" made by Edward Fitzgerald. Such diagnosis is more ingenious than reliable.

A generation ago the Omar of "Old Fitz" had attained popularity unequaled by any English poetry, certainly since Swinburne, probably since Byron. Everybody quoted that work, nearly everybody imitated it. Omar Khayyam societies gave dinners at which celebrities like John Hay delivered addresses. Business men carried the Rubaiyat to their offices, in pocket editions. A copy reposed in the touring trunk of every chorus girl.

It seems probable that the earlier Rubaiyat mode passed away precisely because it was too strong—precisely because a nearly first-rate poetical performance was twisted out of all its proper applications into a guide for conduct and a Book of Common Prayer. And it seems equally probable that, if the new generation is ready to revive the Great Khayyam vogue, revival will be accomplished merely on the ground of its true worth—on the solid ground of its literary value.

Omar is a poet of distinction; that adaptation of Omar which Fitzgerald gave the world is a model of its kind; the artistic merits of both deserve their survival. But good poetry is not always good philosophy. As to the poetry of the Tentmaker, Young America may be ready to pronounce Omar Khayyam "O. K." As to his rule of life—Young America is not yet ready for a metaphysic of lotus eating.

Reunion In Moscow.

It is not surprising that official circles in Moscow are elated over the results of the Litvinoff-Eden conversations. The statement issued jointly by the British envoy and the Russian Commissar for Foreign Affairs carries, in spite of its careful diplomatic wording, assurance of at least partial success for the policy on which the Soviet has been working.

That policy, put in simplest terms, is the affirmation and strengthening of the "collective peace system" whereby an act of aggression by any nation shall be regarded as an act of hostility directed against each party to the system. It is, in essentials, the theory upon which the League of Nations was based, though Russian endeavors at present are concentrated upon reducing the vague general guarantees of the League Covenant to the localized scope of an "Eastern Locarno." As Litvinoff and Eden said in the statement issued in Moscow on Sunday: "In the present international situation it is more than ever necessary to pursue the endeavor to promote the building up of a system of collective security in Europe . . . in conformity with the principles of the League of Nations."

It is a queer turn of the wheel which has now made Soviet Russia, until a few years ago the most caustic critic of the League of Nations, its most ardent advocate. Primarily the change is due to the resignation from the League of Russia's eastern and western neighbors—Japan and Germany—with the obvious implication that neither considers itself bound any longer by the restraints of the Covenant. These resignations first brought Russia into the League and now place her in the forefront of those countries anxious to give Geneva real authority. Here is rather a bitter pill for those American Communists who have still to realize that the Bolsheviks are Russians first and social revolutionaries afterwards.

Of French co-operation in this effort to give the League renewed vitality the Russians could be sure from the beginning. Italian support, so long as there is no interference with Mussolini's designs on Abyssinia, can also be expected. And it may be safely predicted that for the present Russia will turn a blind eye in the direction of Italian imperialism in Africa.

But of the British attitude Moscow has been uncertain. There is no lack of League support in Great Britain. There is profound distaste for using the League as a mask to cloak a vindictive anti-German alliance. So we find, in the Litvinoff-Eden statement, assurance to Berlin that the proposed pact of mutual assistance in Eastern Europe "does not aim at isolation or encirclement of any State," and that "the participation of Germany and Poland would be welcomed as affording the best solution of the problem."

With this reservation Great Britain has now pledged Russia the somewhat indefinite collaboration "inherent in common membership in the League of Nations." Following this step her special peace envoy has hurried to Warsaw to try to solve the enigma of Poland's attitude. If Poland, a prominent League member, should also indorse the policy of a common front, German isolation will, except for one avenue of escape, be complete.

That avenue, of course, would be resumption of League membership by the Berlin government. To that end, regardless of their other differences, both Russian and British diplomacies are working. It begins to appear that Germany will either have to take the co-operative course, or risk almost automatic classification as the nation primarily responsible for threatening world peace.

For The Tired Business Man.

It would seem that practically every possible reason has been offered for the so-called twilight of the theater. Pessimistic prophets have been in their glory for several years, predicting its downfall. The stage has fallen on lean days, they croak, and is being driven out into the cold, cruel world while its child, the movies, is living off the fat of the land.

Occasionally a dissenter to this dirge of the drama is heard, but the voice is usually regarded as one crying in the wilderness. George Jean Nathan was once unique by reason of his constant diatribe against the world of make-believe. Now he is simply one of the pack, baying at the box office. With the death-rattle in its throat, how can the theater survive, particularly if the critics act merely as diagnosticians without any remedial measures to offer? In the meantime, the dissecting continues with blame alternately falling on producer, author, player, and even audience.

It has remained for one of America's foremost theatrical scenic designers to lay the blame on an entirely different and, to many, unexpected source—the scenic designer. Cleon Throckmorton, yesterday announced as a Guggenheim fellow, is ably defending his thesis that stage settings are entirely too realistic, thereby defeating the real raison d'etre of the theater, which is illusion. It is his belief that there should be more appeal to the imagination and that this end should be achieved by suggestion rather than by realism.

While there is much in what Mr. Throckmorton says, he can not by any stretch of the imagination be called a pioneer in this theory. For centuries, the Japanese have been suggesting springtime by the faint outline of a single blossom. On the other hand, a main purpose of the theater is relaxation. Is it practical to paint a single leaf on a backdrop and ask the tired business man to imagine Fontainebleau? In all probability, he wouldn't be able to see the forest for the leaf.

Signs Of Revival.

A $73,000,000 refunding bond issue by the Southern California Edison Co. raised March registrations under the Securities Act to $281,000,000. This healthy figure, following close upon liberalization of the SEC registration requirements, tends to support the opinion of Commissioner Landis that industry no longer views with "hesitating alarm the effect of the Securities Act upon legitimate financing."

The new offerings consist almost exclusively of refunding issues, which replace outstanding bonds bearing higher rates of interest. The resultant reduction of overhead charges will, however, release corporate funds for other purposes and thus give a stimulus to business which may lead to the flotation of new capital issues.

It is these new capital issues that create demands for the products of the heavy industries, where the pressure of unemployment is heaviest. In the past, refunding has normally preceded new investment operations after a period of depression, and it is hoped that this natural sequence will occur now. Certainly, the favorable reception accorded recent refunding issues is evidence of an active investment demand for high-grade corporate securities. With the impeding restrictions of the Securities Act greatly mitigated, the chief remaining doubt concerns the attitude of potential industrial borrowers.

If confidence in the future of private enterprise and belief in the stability of the country's financial and monetary institutions are not impaired, present prospects seem bright for a reopening of the market for new capital issues. With such an expansion of investment outlet, the Government would gradually cease to be so dominant a factor in the capital market. And the dependence of industry upon Government aid would become less and less, as private investment activities assumed more normal proportions.

Envoi.

It seemed as though sufficient horror had gone into the macabre story of the S. S. Morro Castle. Yet in New York the youthful assistant radio operator of the ill-starred ship is now recovering from a nearly successful attempt at suicide. Stigmatized by his questionable implication in the disaster, he was unable to find a job. The miserable man had determined to die by his own hand. And how his future will be any brighter for that attempt it is hard to say.

On the very day that he was found unconscious on the floor of a gas-filled kitchen, the still seaworthy hulk of the Morro Castle was being towed out of New York harbor en route to Baltimore, where it will be broken up for scrap. Less than four years have passed since the proud vessel left the ways to become one of the fastest and finest of the American merchant marine. Its dismembered skeleton will now be sold for junk. Such is the unnatural passing of a queen of the seas.

The one a man, the other an engine: each thus follows its strange destiny. Both were struck down in their prime by the common failure of men and machines to regulate themselves.

So Be It.

Once again the voice of the Vatican has been raised against war. Before a secret consistory of cardinals, but with an emphasis which will reach—and was doubtless intended to reach—the statesmen of all the world—the Pope has denounced this "horrible crime" against humanity. In times past, previous occupants of the papal throne have taken a similar position, often with immediate effect. None of them, however, has taken it in a crisis where such counsel was more obviously required.

Two Catholic republics are ending the third year of their suicidal hostilities in South America. Another is preparing to crush an inoffensive African people. And across the length and breadth of Europe nations of many creeds are arming against each other. Here, surely, is the moment for a plea of restraint by any representative of any church with catholicity, for an appeal to peace by every representative of the Prince of Peace.

Of this moment Pope Pius makes the most. His address has the proper universality. He takes no side among any of the disputes involved. But he does assume a properly partisan tone—does definitely take a side which is the only one possible—in denouncing all who excite to slaughter, ruin and devastation. He asks Heaven to "destroy those who desire war." And his prayer is one to which all others will say a devout "Amen."

Arguments rarely settle anything. If they did most of the problems of the human race would have been settled long ago.

Add Ireland.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

When Finland, of all nations owing war debts to the United States, stepped up to the counter at the appointed time and paid up, the welkin rang.

Now comes Ireland with an even more impressive demonstration of a quality which, in latter years, is more honored in the breach than in the observance. She proposes to pay back, at $1.25 to $1, the $6,000,000 given, not lent, by American citizens, to the cause of the Irish Republic shortly after the war.

Erin go bragh!

Can't Chase Blimp.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have seen my native hills of New Hampshire deprived of their scenic beauty by billboards screaming their wares. Even country farm houses and barns are fast becoming mere props for tin and paper mouthpieces of tobacco, soup, cars, etc.

I have prayed for an English form of radio control so that I might be able to listen to Beethoven without being reminded that "This is brought to you through the courtesy of Katz & Co., makers of fine sausages." One can turn off the radio.

But—sitting in my room, during these early spring, open-window days, seemingly out of reach of the advertiser's clutches, I am forced to listen to the constant droning of an air blimp's motor. This blimp besides advertising a certain brand of rubber attempts to compete with the stars at night with a bit of neon gas. One may avoid the highway, turn off the radio, but you can't chase an annoying blimp out of your room as you would a fly.

If this company must make aerial demonstrations why doesn't it fly a kite? ADRIAN PINSINCE, JR.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of March 27 is the announcement, "Students Set War Protest for April 12."

If it be true that the parents are blind to what their children are doing; if it be true that the teachers are indifferent to what their pupils are doing; if it be true that the clergymen are teaching everything but Christ; if it be true that restless people are listening to anything so that it may be called a "new thing;" if it be true that there are highly unified subversive forces and hidden forces all about us, boring with all their might to destroy this America of ours; if these things be true, and every American knows them to be true—is it not time for us to call halt?

The parents have surely forgotten George Eliot's admonition that "there is a soft, safe place made by nature" for the correction of children. It is not necessary to be brutal in discipline; but a good, sound spanking is the best preventive I know when children get out of hand.

Now these young people who are "striking" against war are being led by forces which have as their final objective the overthrow of our Government. When that shall have been accomplished, and we have been sunk to the level of Soviet Russia, what will they do?

Excerpts From Letters On Mexico

The articles by Dr. Luis Quintanilla, of the Mexican foreign service, completely refute a widespread campaign fostered by the Catholic clergy in the United States.

It does appear now, with evidence from both sides before us, that Frederick Vincent Williams, writer and president of the Serra Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus, is much more concerned with defending a priestly mass and a religious system than he is in the intellectual, cultural, moral and economic advancement of the Mexican people.

Recently The Post rendered significant service when it exposed brutality which exists in certain Negro prison camps and chain gangs of our Southern States. The American branch of the Catholic Church might better devote itself to bringing enlightenment, freedom and social opportunity for the unfortunate millions within the confines of the United States. The Catholic hierarchy can better render this service than to meddle in the affairs of Mexico—a truly great nation south of the Rio Grande.

LOUIS BESSEMER.

Washington.

Speaking for 330,000 Catholics of this archdiocese and 600 priests I wish to thank The Post for its courage in publishing the articles on Mexico by Williams.

The Post may rest assured that its giving the people the facts about Mexico will never injure The Post.

ARCHBISHOP MICHAEL J. CURLEY.

Baltimore, Md.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, has expressed himself in the strongest terms concerning the failure of the United States Government to intervene in the present church and state strife in Mexico.

Americans are not known to be shrinking violets when their rights are invaded, and it may be asserted unofficially that had such invasion occurred the victims would raise such a protest as could not be ignored.

But there have been protests, the archbishop is reported to have said, more than a million resolutions and protests to the United States Government, to no avail. This is indeed singular. Nothing could be safer politically than a firm declaration from the Administration that American rights must be respected. What, then, is the reason for its silence? Can it be that there has actually been no invasion of American rights? Or can it be that Secretary Hull and President Roosevelt realize that Mexico, as a sovereign nation, must be permitted to deal with an internal situation as she thinks best?

ARTHUR S. LANDACRE.

Washington.

I did expect an intelligent refutation to Mr. F. V. Williams' statements which have appeared in The Post. From the matter contained in the first of Dr. Quintanilla's series it certainly seems as though I am to be disappointed.

I would tell the doctor he should have studied "ars rationis" during his schooldays! Evidently he has not even been exposed to "ars dicendi." Why should a fine debater appeal to bigotry? Why should Comrade try to turn American Protestants against American Catholics? THOMAS ALLEN.

Rochester, N. Y.

In your headline reporting the recent arrest of Archbishop Diaz of Mexico City you reported quite erroneously: "Archbishop Held 24 Hours for Officiating Beyond Own District." In stating as a fact what the Associated Press carried as a charge against the archbishop The Post did an injustice to the character of Archbishop Diaz and failed in its duty to those readers who are interested in the truth. In a case like this would it not be fair and proper to report the prelate's denial of the accusation brought against him.

Since the Mexican Ambassador gratuitously asserted that everything was "quiet in Mexico" and that "all the agitation was outside of Mexico," it might be well to note that the number of citizens of Guadalajara killed as a result of the protest against socialistic and sexual education has mounted to six. FRANCIS E. HICKEY.

President Sodality Union, District of Columbia.

Washington.

The Rev. Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, and the Rev. Joseph V. Buckley are flaying Mexico. Now that the President has gone on a vacation I personally hope that whoever is left in charge of our foreign affairs will not take this article too seriously. Let the Mexican people settle their own affairs, and if Curley and Buckley are not satisfied let them both go to Mexico and try and settle this serious question. That is the place for them to take action.

JAMES M. ROBERTSON.

Washington.

Mr. John N. Quinn, in his recent letter to The Post, refuses to believe that there is religious persecution in Mexico today. The very best evidence he can produce, in support of his theory, is a statement of ancient vintage issued nine years ago by an obscure Methodist Episcopal bishop resident in Mexico City.

It is true that the Mexican people have refused to obey the anti-religious edicts of the national revolutionary party. The bishop and Mr. Quinn may denounce the Mexican people for their steadfast loyalty to Christianity — for their determination to defend themselves against the unjust aggressions of an irresponsible and terrorist oligarchy. The Christian spirit, however, is not dead in the world. It still lives. It will soon triumph in Mexico.

JOHN J. O'CONNOR.

Navy Re-enlistments.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the opinion of the Secretary of the Navy the re-enlistment allowance withheld by the current economy act should be returned to the enlisted men of the Navy.

The Secretary explains further that economic legislation deprived men in the service of an allowance upon re-enlistment which the law granted at the time they enlisted and which men now in the service believe they have a right to expect.

The Secretary's plea was contained in his annual report for the fiscal year 1934, in which he also states that the re-enlistments in the Navy have decreased from 93.5 per cent in 1933 to 76.1 per cent in 1934.

If re-enlistments continue to decrease, says the report, it will be economical as well as equitable to restore the re-enlistment allowance.

JOHN D. PASTRANA.

Frog Farms.

Think twice before you try frog farming. It may not pay. The cowpuncher who sought to make the Virginian's life miserable in Owen Wister's novel long ago found out that to his cost. Circulars have been distributed lately urging New Yorkers to go into the business of raising frogs for the market, securing brood stock from semitropical Southern States, where frogs are frogs. The conservation commission warns investors to be on their guard.

Commissioner Osborne has collected the latest information from various parts of the country. Wisconsin reports that the frog ranches in that State have not been very successful in producing frogs by artificial propagation. Even Louisiana confirms the failure of artificial efforts along this line. The United States Bureau of Fisheries is content to announce that "while there may be considerable benefits in the marketing of frogs, success in artificial propagation on a commercial scale still awaits realization." Captive frogs, on the dole, as it were, are apparently not inclined to submit to the rigors of domestic life.

The Post Impressionist

Just a Snifter.

Post Office, Tuesday.

IT appears that there is a tall thermometer of degrees in the measurement of drink as related to automobile accidents. It appears, also, that we have, all of us, been guilty of loose thinking in our wholesale condemnation of the drunken driver.

There is such a thing as a drunken driver—of course.

But there is also the drinking driver.

Herman A. Heise, M. D., says so.

* * *

To be sure, Dr. Heise lives in Milwaukee, and there will be Washingtonians, Baltimoreans and eke New Yorkers to say that Milwaukee is "different." There will be speedy Philadelphians to say so, too. There will even be people in the employ of St. Louis breweries who will hint things about the rival beers of Milwaukee. There will be distillers from Pittsburgh and Louisville who may inquire:

"What price beer and light wines now?"

But the Post-Impressionist does not believe that Milwaukee is really "different"—that is, different "within the meaning of the act." He has been to Milwaukee, and he has not been able to observe that, drunk for drunk, there is any vital variation between the Milwaukee types and those of most other cities.

Well, then, Dr. Heise some months ago undertook, out there, a clinical study of 119 accidents resulting—the accidents, not the clinical investigation—in the deaths of 216 persons. When he had finished his investigations, he wrote an article about them. This article appears in the Journal of the American Medical Association, and therein Dr. Heise declares that:

(a) The Drunken Driver—i. e., either the frankly blotto driver or the driver who is obviously blotto whether he admits it or not—isn't the major menace of the road.

(b) The major menace of the road is the wise driver who believes he can drive jes 's good aft' shotertwo—'n meebie better.

He's the boss killer.

He evinces marvelous skill in killing everybody except himself.

* * *

Dr. Heise found that, among his 119 cases—typical cases he considers them — automobile accidents in which there was no alcoholic ingredient perceptible to the scientific eye (or nose) "involved only slightly more than one person per accident." On the other hand, he found that automobile accidents in which alcohol was a factor were "responsible for injury or death to more than two people per accident." On the third hand—

(Why not "third hand"? This is science; it isn't sculpture!)

On the third hand, most of the alcoholic accidents occurred, not when the driver was drunk, but merely "after little nips."

Conscience does compel us to note that the Doctor finds a relation between the quantity of alcohol consumed and the quality of the accidents occasioned. Out-and-out slaughter is achieved more easily after a good many nifters. The driver who likes jes' one 'r two may down that number in the consolatory knowledge that he will most likely not do more than maim somebody for life.

But this implies simply that the question is relative. Full-fledged drunkenness causes few accidents: it causes total incapacity. The varying-stages of nifter-induced illumination provide varying grades of injury—up to and including fatal injury.

Says Dr. Heise:

"Considering a person sober as long as he can still walk and talk is responsible for the small value of present-day statistics regarding the relationship of alcohol to automobile accidents."

The way Thornton Hardy used to put it to the Post-Impressionist was:

"Nips may not make a man drunk, but they do dull the fine edge of discretion."

Safety first! Is it, then, better—or less perilous to the public—for a driver to get really drunk and be done with it?

Not at all, we should say—because, if you get really drunk, your car, while being less of a danger to other people than if you are merely festooned, will be no use whatever to yourself. And that is not thrifty.

Painful as it may sound, unpleasant as it is to say it, the only safe course is not to drink at all—when driving, or about to drive, an automobile. A driver should always leave himself a two-hour leeway.

That is the Post-Impressionist's own rule.

He never breaks it himself. He rigorously insists on his friends' adherence to it.

Moreover, he doesn't own an automobile. He doesn't know how to drive one. He always rides in his friends' cars.

Memel Trial Climax Of Lengthy Dispute

City Will Remain Chronic Sore Spot With Letts Facing Poland And Germany.

By Lothrop Stoddard.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

WHETHER the current tension over death sentences and other penalties meted out to Memel Nazis by the Lithuanian courts is amicably adjusted or whether it develops as an important part of the present European crisis, Memel, itself, will probably continue to be a sore spot in Europe's troubled diplomatic scene. Though not intrinsically of major importance, the problem of Memel is one of those chronic irritants which have done so much to envenom relations between European peoples. Furthermore, this question is complex; it is really a local problem within a larger problem possessing wide ramifications.

The city of Memel owes its existence to its situation at the mouth of the estuary, where the river Niemen empties into the Baltic Sea. The Niemen is a large river, due to the confluence of several streams some of which drain much of Lithuania to the eastward, while others rise in Poland to the south. From time immemorial the Niemen has been the channed for an extensive timber trade, its waters bearing countless log rafts from the great forests of the hinterland.

To develop and control this trade, the Teutonic knights founded Memel away back in the Middle Ages, and the city thus became the outpost of East Prussia, which the knights were then conquering and making a Germanic land. And thus Memel remained until the close of the great war, its geographical connection with East Prussia being assured by a narrow strip of territory. Of course, before the war, Russia owned all of what is now both Lithuania and Poland.

The Versailles conference, however, undertook to rearrange the map of Europe along nationalistic lines. Among other matters, it recognized the right of both Poles and Lithuanians to revived national life. This at once brought the question to Memel to the fore.

• • • •

HISTORICALLY, Lithuania had been virtually cut off from the sea. Certainly, Memel was its logical port, as well as the natural outlet for its timber trade. The city itself was predominantly German. The peasants of the connecting strip with East Prussia were mainly Lithuanian in origin though they had been under German influence for centuries and were Lutheran Protestants, whereas their Lithuanian kinsmen were Roman Catholics.

In eastern Europe, religious distinctions are of great practical importance, often outweighing ties of blood and language. A good example of this was the vote of the so-called Mazurs of nearby East Prussia at the plebiscite held under the terms of the Versailles Treaty to decide whether they should stay with Germany or go to Poland. The Mazurs are undoubtedly Slavic in blood and speak a Polish dialect yet they are Lutherans. So, much to the surprise and chagrin of the Poles, they voted overwhelmingly to remain with the Reich.

The inhabitants of Memel-land, however, were not allowed to determine their future political allegiance. The Allied Powers decided that this district should be severed from the Reich, and German protests were answered by a statement that since the port of Memel was Lithuania's only sea-outlet, and since a majority of the population of the region outside the city itself was of Lithuanian stock, Memel-land should go to the projected new state of Lithuania. So Germany formally ceded Memel under Article 99 of the Versailles Treaty, though she did it under protest and with the conviction that a gross injustice had been done. That is one of the list of grievances which Germany has nursed even since Versailles and which practically all Germans are resolved to undo at the first feasible opportunity.

• • • •

HOWEVER, this is by no means the whole story. The creation of an independent Lithuania was itself no easy matter, because it involved a complicated dispute with Poland. Originally, Poles and Lithuanians had been distinct people. But back in the Middle Ages a marriage between their two royal houses had resulted in what was then called a dynastic union. In time Poland, larger and more powerful, had partially assimilated its minor partner. Most of the Lithuanian nobles, especially, came to feel themselves Poles, though the people continued to speak Lithuanian.

Then both countries fell protestingly under Russian rule, with resulting nationalistic movements against Russian domination. Both peoples longed for independence. But in certain regions the two movements overlapped, notably in Vilna, the historic Lithuanian capital. Furthermore, the Poles wanted to renew the political union which had existed before the Russian conquest, many Polish nationalists going so far as to deny that the Lithuanians were a separate people.

Just what, then, was Lithuania? That was a question not fully decided at the peace conference. So the Versailles Treaty provided that the Germans should cede Memel, not to Lithuania, but to the allied powers, who should regulate its ultimate disposition as they saw fit. Indeed, the whole problem was soon complicated by the aggressive action of the Poles, who seized Vilna and other disputed areas inhabited by a mixed population.

These strong-arm measures precipitated a bitter feud which has never been settled. Unable to oppose the Poles by force of arms, the Lithuanians declared that a state of war existed between the two countries, and to this day relations between the two remain abnormal. The provisional frontier is closed and guarded; Lithuanian national life remains chronically ulcerated, and the Lithuanian people have acquired a perpetual war-mentality.

• • • •

THIS implacable Polish-Lithuanian feud inevitably reacted disastrously upon the Memel situation. In their projected arrangements the Allies taking account of the fact that the Niemen was an outlet for both Poland and Lithuania, declared it to be a river "affected with an international interest" and planned to give Poland appropriate commercial facilities at the port of Memel. To this the Lithuanians stubbornly objected as part of their anti-Polish boycott, and until Lithuania did agree to recognize Poland's interest in the port of Memel, the Allies refused to turn over Memel-land to its jurisdiction.

Complicated negotiations ensued, during which the Allies turned the matter over to the League of Nations. The league, in turn, appointed a committee, to be headed by a prominent neutral. And it is interesting to note that the chairman chosen was an American, Norman H. Davis, now our famous "Ambassador at large," who took a prominent part in the proceedings although America, not being a member of the league, was not officially involved in any way. Those proceedings were both thorny and stormy, for in the interim the Lithuanians, taking matters into their own hands, defied both the Allied Powers and the league by seizing Memel much as the Poles had seized Vilna from them.

Ultimately, by a diplomatic convention signed between the Allied Powers and Lithuania on May 8, 1924, the situation was regularizedfi. Memel-land was thereby constituted a unit under Lithuanian sovereignity, but with a large measure of local self-government and with legal protection for the German element. Lithuania likewise acknowledged the port of Memel to be affected with an international interest, thus tacitly admitting the commercial rights of Poland.

• • • •

THE settlement, however, has never worked smoothly. The Poles complain that the Lithuanians have not lived up to their agreement and that Polish commerce is thereby handicapped in various ways. The German element complains even more bitterly, alleging that the Lithuanians have so infringed upon the territory's legal autonomy that the promised self-government has become a mockery.

It appears that, during the past year or more, the Lithuanian authorities have sharply curtailed the Germans' political activities. But the Lithuanians answer that those activities were of a revolutionary character designed to prepare forcible reunion with Germany, and hence treasonable.

The recent treason trials and their outcome are thus the climax to a long series of local disputes. They certainly indicate profoundly unsatisfactory conditions in Memel-land, and thereby indicate more trouble in the future. Whatever its legal status, the Memel question is most emphatically not "settled" in any real sense.

Church Names District Heads

Wilmington Conference of Methodists Concludes Seaford Sessions.

By the Associated Press.

Seaford, Del., April 1.—The reading of the pastoral assignments and the appointment of district superintendents today ended the meeting of the Wilmington Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Rev. J. L. Bunting, of Crisfield, Md., was made superintendent of the Seaford District, succeeding the Rev. Leonard White, who was assigned to a pastorate at Newark, Del.

The Rev. W. E. Gunby, who has been pastor at Newark, received the Wilmington District superintendency. He succeeded the Rev. D. W. Jacobs, named pastor at Snow Hill, Md.

Superintendency of the Dover District went to the Rev E. C. Hallman, formerly superintendent of the Middletown District, which was eliminated by the conference Saturday in reducing the number of districts from four to three. Mr. Hallman succeeded the Rev. W. E Habbart, who was granted a year's leave.

With Carlisle Bargeron

The Administration's Frankness.

THERE are a lot of disgusted persons around Washington these days, including Democratic Senators and members of the House, as well as some officials in the executive branch, but it is doubtful if anybody is more disgusted than those Washington correspondents, who month after month poured out stuff about the engaging frankness, the disarming candor of the present Administration. It was the smile and addressing them by their first names that misled the boys, misled them in the face, too, of statements by Mr. Roosevelt's campaign biographer that candor and frankness were two of the least of the President's attributes.

BARGERON.

Mr. Ernest Lindley, the biographer, didn't say it this directly, of course. But in his book, "The First 100 Days," he made no effort to conceal his admiration for what he described as Mr. Roosevelt's ability to cover up his purposes with generalities and well-chosen phrases. He accomplishes his purposes by indirect means, said Mr. Lindley proudly.

• • • •

However, what has knocked the whole engaging frankness and disarming candor business into a cocked hat is the Administration's attitude throughout the consideration of the $5,000,000,000 public works bill. Trickery and deception have marked it all the way through and when Mr. Roosevelt sought to head off the storm caused by the revelation that Messrs. Hopkins and Tugwell were to administer the bulk of it by issuing a statement that he was to administer the bill himself, it was too much for the strongest admirers in the newspaper corps.

"There is no getting around it," they said reluctantly, "that is simply too much bunk."

In short, an atmosphere having been created that causes most of the Administration's moves to be looked upon with suspicion, it is amazing that more Senators are not standing with Carter Glass in his fight on the $5,000,000,000 bill.

The Senator thinks, and justifiably so, that the approximately $1,000,000,000 earmarked in the bill for loans or gifts to cities and States will not be used so much in the high-minded purpose of giving men work but to permit the Administration to carry on its power fight, or some other social experiment which it might have up its sleeve. And there is no telling what in the name of goodness it may not have up there.

To prevent this and insure the money being spent for the purposes represented to Congress Glass has inserted a provision requiring that one-third of the money must be spent on labor. It is this requirement that caused Secretary Ickes to hit the ceiling and insist that passage of the bill be held up until it is taken out. Yesterday saw the whole Congress, with a virtual exception of Glass, preparing to bow to the Administration whip.

• • • •

The Administration's insistence that the requirement be taken out should increase the suspicion. Ickes in one letter to Glass said it might prevent the carrying out of some projects "socially desirable." When this confirmed Glass' worst suspicions the Secretary in another letter said it was unfortunate use of words. It was, indeed, or rather it would have been with a responsible Congress on the job.

To clinch his argument Glass got a statement from Comptroller McCarl that not only would he take into consideration labor directly employed on a project under this fund, but labor employed back in the plant where the material for the project is manufactured. This would seem to give the spenders plenty of latitude if their concern is really to put men to work. If they want to give or lend money to cities to buy municipal power plants or other such undertakings of course, it doesn't. Is there any reason why Glass should not be suspicious? The wonder is that the whole Congress is not in the same mood.

Certainly, the time has long since passed when it is only necessary for an Administration admirer to say "Oh, they won't abuse the power given them."

Spring-Cleaning Of The Mind: Or New Notes On An Old Theme By Esme Wingfield-Stratford.

By Theodore Hall.

ALONG about this time of year, when I was young, I used to be given my springtime tablespoonful of sulphur and molasses. Precisely what it did I've never found out—I suspect it of medieval mummery in clearing the brain of winter vapors. And also it was the time when housewives put on biddy caps, flung open the windows and raised a cyclone of dust which could be seen all over town. Down, you remember, came everything in the house but the wallpaper. And though I haven't seen in ages one of those spined and prickly curtain-stretching frames in a backyard, there is still a feeling in this day's air of housecleaning.

In some years of random reading I've met two or three good, strong statements, but the one which has lastest longest—or at least that which pops up now—comes, as I recall, from Arnold Bennett. It runs to the effect that we live all our lives with a machine of infinitely greater delicacy than the finest Zurich watch, and we don't give it the common care of the family Ford or even the vacuum cleaner. Go off in a quiet corner and consider how you treat your own mind. Should you honestly find that your capacity for keeping your vacuum cleaner out of sea-water, or your zeal in seeing to it that the breaker-points of your Ford are adjusted and the crankcase full, is no greater than your carefulness with your own mental workings, then you are something considerably more magnificent than the conclusion of Mr. Kipling's "If."

But—as you will discover in the author's preface of any "self-help" book—it is always a safe bet for your interlocutor to proceed.

OF course we find ourselves a little dubious about the sort of men who come out in print and tell us how to live our lives and think our thoughts. That sometimes extends into extreme and violent dislike for the species. Yet for every reader who takes one look at Abbe Dimmet's "Art of Thinking," say, and makes, so to speak, for the lee rail, there's another who all but puts the little volume up in a wall niche with a candle before it. I wouldn't dispute either reaction. Most of us can discover our meat or poison by ourselves.

So I shall make but the most general observations on today's spring house-cleaning book—"New Minds For Old" (Macmillan, $3). Its author, Esme Wingfield-Stratford, is a middle-aged English scholar and historian, a Cambridge man (Rupert Brooke once succeeded him in a scholarship there), and the author of novels, poetry, histories of English patriotism and British civilization, and that last well-remembered book, "Those Earnest Victorians." Always he has been concerned with education and mind-training—now he gives us a manual and a book of discourse which is Mr. Bennett's "How To Live on 24 Hours a Day" raised some dozen degrees in elegance, penetration and palatable earnestness. Yes, and in spirit, too.

It wasn't the spring which brought Mr. Wingfield-Stratford out (I'm going to give initials for his name after this)—it was the vista of world politics. Looking around at a number of contemporary societies which you know very well, he strikes direct to the root of them and declares that man and his mind come first. "You can not effect reform backwards, and all talk of salvaging society without first salvaging the minds and spirits of its members is sheer self-deception. Given second-rate minds, first-rate plans for ending a crisis or starting a Utopia are not worth the paper on which they are written."

And the only way to overhaul society, he says flatly, is to overhaul yourself.

"BUT what can I do?" Mr. W.-S. hears your cry at once. And on your behalf he digs in his spurs and charges, with rather more success than Don Quixote did the wind-mills, all those cults and creeds which say you can't do anything—jargon-philosophers, behaviorists, predestinationists and determinists of all sorts. Summary: "For the normal individual, who is more interested in life than in metaphysical cobwebs, it is as pointless to ask, 'Do you believe in free will?' as 'Do you believe in health?' Of course, he believes in it—what really matters is whether, and to what extent, he has achieved it."

And now—perhaps you've been ready some time—you want the meat and the kernel, the very ikon of success. Well, I blush to give it to you in one sentence. "Conquer, first your kingdom of the mind," writes Mr. W-S., "and those other things, salary, promotion, power, and fame, shall—for what they are worth—be added unto you." I don't blame you for throwing up your hands; the copyright on that expired about the time man invented the wheel.

But slow as Shakespeare neatly put it. It is outrageously silly to turn away from self-command, poise, concentration, creative order, imagination—all the terms which Mr. W-S. brings up and dilates upon—just because we've heard the words before. You must trust him that he will make those old banalities vital, barbed, and interesting. Which he does, to the Queen's taste and not Queen Victoria alone, either. From the Sermon on the Mount to the Yoga Sutras of Patanjali, from medieval legends to psychoanalysis, Mr. W-S. draws his illustrations of how you, sitting in a room you know like the back of your hand, can make the old generalities fresh and immediate and startling.

"New Minds For Old" may have a theme as gray-bearded as Methesulah. But the charm and saltiness and force of its writing make it as new as the buds outside the window. And it doesn't even need that recommendation. It's no reason for letting your Ford run on dry bearings that the oil was formed 60,000,000 years ago.

Cumberland Delegation To Attend D. C. Meeting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 1.—A delegation from Cumberland will attend the meeting of the Maryland Federation of Music Clubs in the Congressional Country Club, Chevy Chase, Md., April 5 and 6. The federation will be entertained by the music section of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase.

The delegation will include Mrs. Richard W. Trevaskis, first vice president of the federation; Mrs. Frank Stuart Rowe, second vice president; Mrs. R. LeRoy Critchfield, chairman of club rating; Mrs. S. Lua Syckes, Alleghany County chairman of library; her son, Wilton Syckes, who will play on the junior program; Mrs. James Weir Kirk and Mrs. Thomas L. Popp, representing the Cumberland Music and Arts Club.

Children Attend Clinic.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Piedmont, W. Va., April 1.—Approximately 500 children have been immunized against diphtheria at the clinic at Piedmont High School by Dr. J. H. Wolverton, Piedmont Mineral County health officer. Members of the junior department of the Piedmont Woman's Club visited homes to urge the parents to send the children to the clinic.

Eastur Monath

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

APRIL was the second month of the ancient pagan Roman calendar, part of the first month of the medieval Christian calendar, and the fourth month of the Julius Caesar and contemporary calendars. This Latin name is Aprilis, with an uncertain derivation; possibly Aperilis, from aperire, to open, since the spring flowers and buds begin to open.

Others say that since the month of April was sacred to Venus, the Festum Veneris being held on the first day, the month might originally have been called Aphrilis, from the Greek form of the goddess' name, which was Aphrodite. This is no more than a shrewd conjecture.

• • • •

In Rome April was a great month for open-air games and festivals. Nearly every day was a feast day of some kind; which is easy enough to understand, for American tourists now find that of all seasons of the year, April is the best month to spend in Rome.

The Anglo-Saxons called April Oster-Monath or Eastur-Monath, referring to the Saxon goddess of Spring, from whose name Eastre the modern word Easter is derived.

The very word April is poetry, and the poets have sung the praises of this month from Chaucer to the present day.

• • • •

And blossoming boughs of April in laughter shake.

Bliss Carman:

Make me over, Mother April,
When the sap begins to stir!

The April winds are magical,
And thrill our tuneful frames;
The garden walks are passional
To bachelors and dames.

Clinton Scollard:

The lyric sound of laughter
Fills all the April hills,
The joy-song of the crocus,
The mirth of daffodils.

And while speaking of April, let me also call public attention to a new volume of poems by Kimball Flaccus, called "Avalanche of April," published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

Hundreds Cast Lines, Opening Trout Season

Maryland Streams, Lakes Lure Many Despite the Cold Drizzle.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., April 1.—When the stroke of midnight ushered in a new month and the beginning of the trout fishing season, hundreds of fishermen, including Federal dignitaries, let lines fly and started matching wits with the speckled beauties.

It was a cold, drizzly night and the weather continued unfavorable throughout the day. The fish, seemingly distrustful of a sudden superabundance of food, in form of bait, were wary. But many anglers made satisfactory catches.

Fishing Creek and Hunting Creek, favorite mountain streams, looked like a bivouac of fireflies as dozens of flashlights, held by raincoated individuals, gleamed and blinked. Few fishermen had caught the full creel of 10 trout of 7 inches in length as the day wore on.

Garner Rushes Back.

Vice President John N. Garner visited the fishermen's haunts yesterday, but rushed away to Washington before the season began. He was a guest of Kingman Brewster, Washington sportsman, who has a fishing lodge on Hunting Creek.

Also among Brewster's guests were Senators Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic floor leader, from Arkansas; Marcus A. Coolidge, Massachusetts; Burton K. Wheeler, Montana, and Hendrick Shipstead, Minnesota.

Others included former Senators James E. Watson, Indiana, and C. C. Dill, Washington, and Charles A. March, of the Federal Trade Commission. Some of the party, including Senators Wheeler and Coolidge, stayed overnight and went fishing this morning. They were said to have caught their limit by 10 o'clock.

Out on Lakes.

Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Hoover, was out with guests on his chain of trout lakes early in the day. With him were Isaac and Lewis Straus.

The average fish caught was reported to measure between 8 and 10 inches in length, which anglers say is "the right size." Some rainbow trout ran as high as 14 inches.

Fishermen began early yesterday and jockeyed about seeking advantageous castings spots. Several hundred automobiles brought them here, the licenses showing the majority of the cars to be from Washington, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Helen Hunter Is Bride.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., April 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hunter, Wrights Crossing, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Hunter, to John P. Knieriem, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Knieriem, of Cumberland, at St. Paul's Lutheran Church Friday. The Rev. Walter V. Simon, the pastor, officiated. The attendants were Miss Frances Hunter, sister of the bride, and Virgil Nixon, Frostburg.

Pump Priming Ended By Works Relief Plan

President's Purpose Is To Keep Spending Down By Prudent Administration.

By Elliott Thurston.

NOT only the dole, but pump-priming as well, has been tossed overboard by the New Deal. Enthroned instead is the idea of work-relief which has neither the advantage of being economical nor of being a direct stimulus to business. It falls somewhere between the economy of the dole, as advocated by most business leaders, and the large scale pump-priming of the Keynes school, to which Gov. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board belongs.

While it has been evident for some time that the President was headed for this middle ground, the latest maneuvering on the $4,880,000,000 works relief bill, taken together with various semi-official utterances, make clear that the money is to be spent primarily to make jobs but without the major intention of stimulating heavy or other industry, except as the distribution of money serves to create more buying power.

Thus Mr. Roosevelt appears to have arrived at a conception quite his own. And he has arrived at it on social rather than economic grounds. He has already stated his view that the dole destroys morale. Some of his advisers have argued also that it breeds unrest and revolution. Their view and evidently his is that it is socially and politically better and safer to spend relief money in order to keep the idle busy, doing anything, rather than merely to sustain them, doing nothing.

Few will challenge the soundness of this social reasoning. Nevertheless it makes economic considerations secondary, and it is at least open to argument whether, in the longer view, the question should not be determined primarily on economic grounds. If it were, the choice would be, broadly, between continuing the dole until private business absorbed the bulk of the idle, or spending with the idea of directly stimulating business so that it in turn would create jobs.

• • • •

THE essential question is to decide what policy will best promote recovery. The business men who met late last fall at White Sulphur Springs urged the dole because it cost less and would, they felt, be best from the standpoint of the budget and restoration of confidence. They had no faith in pump-priming, because of the excessive costs experienced in England and in this country, and because of numerous other objections both theoretical and practical. Storing up reserves in good times to be spent on public works and pump-priming generally when bad times come is one thing. Such a high rate of spending after five years of depression, with the budget out of balance as it never has been before, is quite another matter.

When the President's work-relief bill was launched it seemed to be an attempt to find middle ground, but still with heavy emphasis on pump-priming. No specific plan had been drawn up and none has yet been made public although various designs for spending are reported to be in the President's hands. However, in the meantime the emphasis on spending to stimulate industry has diminished and nearly all discussion of plans within the Administration stresses simply the creation of work for the sake of the work itself. The idea is to get men off the dole and into anything that will keep them occupied, whether that "work" is necessary or productive or not.

This is a considerable departure from all of the pump-priming theory. It appears to come down to a mere difference between the money cost of the dole and that of finding some sort of work for those able-bodied unemployed now on the dole. With the prevailing wage demand struck out of the bill, the cost may prove to be moderate enough so that the drain on the budget will not be disturbingly large as compared with the cost of the dole. That depends chiefly upon administration.

• • • •

UNLESS relief is more efficiently administered in the future than it has been in the past, the costs are sure to be excessive. The rolls will have to be weeded out whether relief is on the basis of the dole or of made work. There will have to be a far greater political purging than before. However, the President's purpose is certainly to get better administration, and this does not consist simply in putting honest men in charge. They must not only be honest, but able to work with politicians. Mr. Ickes is being assigned to a lesser role in relief, not because he is not a hard-working, conscientious official, but because he has proved to be arbitrary and unable to function without continual political turmoil.

However, the point is that, with the unlimited discretion given him on the spending, with the prevailing wage out, Mr. Roosevelt is free to direct the spending so prudently and economically that in the end the burden on the budget will not appear exorbitant or incompatible with the Government's financial integrity. The discarding of the prodigality implied in pump-priming is one reassurance. It may be that the dole would have been the best solution from the economic if not from the strictly humanitarian viewpoint on which Mr. Roosevelt has acted.

In any event, as the work-relief picture has now shaped up, it is distinctly to the right of the political center, and in operation as now intended may prove far more reassuring than appeared at first. The opportunity exists to make it infinitely more efficient. The President has high hopes that much of the huge appropriation will not be spent. That depends to a large degree upon the rate at which private business is able to take the load off the public treasury. It also depends upon prudence in the spending. And the will exists at the White House to be prudent. That is why the prevailing wage was fought, why relief administration is being more directly under the President's supervision and why pump-priming has been jettisoned as a primary conception behind the program.

Last Rites Today For Edgar Priest

Washington Cathedral to Be Scene of Services.

Last rites for Edgar Priest, musical director, will be held in the great choir of the Washington Cathedral today at 11 a. m.

Arrangements were completed yesterday by the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington and of the cathedral, of which Mr. Priest was choirmaster and organist.

Burial will be in the cathedral crypt, where Mr. Priest's leaders, the Rt. Rev. Herbert L. Satterlee and the Rt. Rev. Alfred Harding, also are entombed. At the funeral the choir boys will not sing, and, in deference to Mr. Priest's wishes, there will be only simple rites.

Mr. Priest, who was 57 years old, a native of Yorkshire, England, died at Sibley Hospital Saturday night. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edith Priest; a brother and a sister.

At the daily recital at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints yesterday, the last number on the program of Edward T. Kimball, organist, "St. Anne Fugue," was dedicated to the memory of Mr. Priest. Many friends of the deceased organist were present.

Jobless Picket The White House

But Siege Is Brief as Rain Dampens Ardor.

A dozen men and women, marching under the banner of the National Unemployment League," yesterday picketed the White House for a short time until rain dampened their ardor.

Placards bearing such signs as "Give us a decent living, Mr. President, or we'll take it," and "Mr. President, you have failed the workers of the Nation," were worn by members of the group, who included two women.

The contingent dispersed soon after word was relayed from the White House that they might tramp in front of the Executive Mansion as long as they liked, so long as they did not interfere with traffic or indulge in sidewalk speeches.

Leaders of the group, which was headed by Anthony Ramuglia, of California, said they intended to return in May with a "caravan" in protest against the New Deal relief program.

Alumni Gather From All U. S. For Convention

Ambassador Saito to Speak Saturday; Sessions Open Tomorrow.

With graduates of 70 colleges and universities in attendance, the twenty-first national convention of the American Alumni Council will open tomorrow in Wardman Park Hotel to continue through Saturday.

The convention is expected to bring together the largest graduate gathering since the organization was formed at Ohio State University, February 13, 1913.

Hirosi Saito, the Japanese Ambassador, will speak at a luncheon meeting Saturday. Other speakers will be H. H. Clegg, assistant director of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, and Ward M. Cannady, assistant administrator of the Federal Housing Administration.

Tomorrow, Washington club chapters of colleges in all parts of the country will attend meetings, dinners and smokers.

To Visit First Lady.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will receive the alumni workers at the White House Friday, after which there will be a tour of the city with a visit to the Tidal Basin.

Speakers at a banquet to be held Friday night include Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, former dean of the University of Utah; Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York; Dixon Ryan Fox, president of Union College and Bishop James H. Ryan, president of Catholic University.

The convention will close Saturday night with a banquet.

First of the Month, No Bills, Sunny Skies—and April Fool

At the Aquarium the telephone jangled.

"Is Mr. Pickerel there?" inquired a voice, and then there was a low, triumphant laugh.

"Mr. Pickerel," gravely responded Fred Orsinger, who, as director, is genial keeper of the fish, "Mr. Pickerel is in his bath just now."

It was simply April Fool's Day, born in the mists of time, and destined, perhaps, to exist as an annual paradise for practical pranksters until to earth is a charred cinder in space, like the moon.

Mr. Pickerel, Mr. Pike, Mr. Bass and Mr. Turtle, in fact all the finny fellows who bob and dip in the glass tanks, were on call. It worried them not a whit—and the giant turtle waved his flippers indifferently.

When the funsters telephoned the Zoo, they found, however, the lines to the lion, reptile and monkey houses had been disconnected for the day.

"Is Mr. Wolf there," they wanted to say, but couldn't.

"Is Mr. Fox about. Where, oh where, is Mr. Seal?"

So many of them contented themselves with telling strangers, if they wanted to call a hotel where they could get good accommodations, cheap, just dial a certain number.

The number was that of St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Although the children, on their way to school, were acutely aware of the occasion, probably they did not realize that April Fool's Day originated in pagan times, probably at the Hindu's Hull Festival or the Roman Feast of Fools.

"There's dirt on your nose," they shrieked, "April Fool!"

"There's no school today, April Fool!"

So acute becomes the day at the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. each year that extra operators who can be polite in the face of boredom were busy.

And, in yesterday's downpour, a funny fellow called the Fire Department desperately.

Choir of 54 Voices Heard At Concert

Reception After Program of Famous Kreuzcher, of Dresden.

Yesterday with all of its glowering skies and dripping clouds failed to impress Washingtonians with the advisability of staying indoors, and in the afternoon all thoughts of cheery fires and tempting books were cast aside in favor of a trip through the pink and white fairyland along the Potomac and around the Tidal Basin.

Later in the afternoon the weather cleared in time for the reception and concert the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, gave at the Mayflower Hotel, when the members of diplomatic, official and residential sets gathered in the grand ballroom to hear the famous Kreuzcher of Dresden.

The huge gold and white room was filled to overflowing. It seemed that all of Washington must have been there, listening entranced to the choir—the 33 youngsters whose clear flute-like voices floated high but over the rich deep tones of the 21 older singers. They first sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" without a trace of an accent, and then followed it with their own national anthem. If any one of their selections could be said to have received more applause than the rest it was the "Echo-Lied." In it there was such a realistic echo that not until a small corner balcony containing a few of the lads was spied was the secret discovered.

Reception Follows Concert.

Following the concert there was a delightful reception in the green and bronze Chinese room. The tables were decorated with huge baskets of red carnations, white lilies and yellow snapdragons, tied with the colors of Germany and the United States. On the center table there was a large reproduction in sugar of the famous Brandenburger Thor, of Berlin. Beneath it was inscribed "Hiel Dem Dresden Kreuzchor," (Welcome Choir of Dresden). On another table there was a large crystal swastika, which upon closer examination was found to be of ice. Another fascinating decoration was a large shaped block of ice encasing the German flag. These tables were laden with delicious sugar baskets and horns of plenty, out of which poured candies, salads and countless cakes and sandwiches.

Among those glimpsed mingling with the guests were the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka, the latter wearing a smart black suit and tiny off-the-face hat, and their attractive blonde daughter, Mlle. Nella Veverka, whose red frock was trimmed at the neck with a scarlet kerchief. Near them was the Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Patterson, and his two daughters, one dark and one fair, each modishly clad in black. The Minister of Iran was accompanied by Mme. Djalal, who was attired in black trimmed with mink and a small straight-brimmed hat of black. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, had on a frock of heavy black crepe fashioned with a shirred cape edged with a band of seal. Her large hat was of black Milan straw.

Others at Reception.

Others seen were the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted; the Charge d'Affaires of Egypt, Nicolas Khalil Bey; the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Baroness Beck-Friis, who were accompanied by their charming daughter, Miss Christiana Beck-Friis, in a smart gray ensemble; Mme. Ales Broz, wife of the First Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation, in black and accompanied by her debutante daughter, Miss Gladys Broz, who was wearing a frock of brick red and a small matching turban.

Mme. Sze, wife of the Minister of China, wore black trimmed with bands of mink. The Attache of the Belgium Embassy and Mme. Walravens, the latter wearing a bright shade of green frock and small close-fitting hat of the same shade, were seen chatting with friends. Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, wife of the Senator from New Hampshire, wore a becoming costume of deep violet. Miss Grace Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel Roper, wore a gown of deep crimson with a black coat and hat. The Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips were glimpsed, the latter wearing a smart gown of narrow stripes of black and white.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja also were there, the latter in black trimmed with silver fox and wearing a small hat of lacquered straw. Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark was in modish black, as was Mrs. C. Augustus Simpson, who was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Jerome Johnson, wearing an unusual frock of black and jade green.

Chilean Counselor a Guest.

The Counselor of the Chilean Embassy, Senor Don Benjamin Cohen, stood chatting for a moment with Senor Don Mario Rodriguez, Secretary of the Embassy, and Miss Marjorie Talman, whose wedding will take place shortly. Miss Talman was in dark blue trimmed with red, blue and white. Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, in dark red, was accompanied by her young daughter, Miss Dolly Fleming, who was wearing a frock of French blue and black printed crepe and a smart off-the-face hat. Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin, wife of Judge Goodwin, was with Baroness Von Below.

Among those seen in the promenade were Major and Mrs. Parker West, the latter in dark green; Commander and Mrs. John Roper, son and daughter-in-law of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper; Miss Mary Winifred Brown, attired in gray and with black-and-white accessories; Mrs. Ollie James, in red; Miss Emily Maddux.

Frau Scholz, wife of the Secretary of the German Embassy, wearing dark blue and white printed crepe; Mrs. Richard M. Cutts, in dark green with a beige coat and hat; Mrs. Julien Friant in gray, accompanied by her young daughter, Miss Katherine Friant, who was in beige; Miss Janet Harrison, wearing brown and white and a small brown hat trimmed with a band of orange, and her cousin, Miss Nancy Harrison, in a green frock with a small halo hat of black with a band of white.

Miss Lilla Fisk Engaged to Wed H.P. Bingham, Jr

Cousin of Joseph C. Grew and Yachtsman's Son to Be Married.

Mrs. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, of New York, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Lilla Fisk, to Mr. Harry Payne Bingham, jr., son of Mr. Harry Payne Bingham, of New York, and Mrs. G. Harlan Miller, of New York, Whimsey Farm, Arlington, Vt., and Paris.

On her mother's side Miss Fisk is a granddaughter of the late Henry Rufus Kendall, who at one time formed a partnership with the late Chauncey M. Depew, and is a grandniece of the late Charles Hart, one of the foremost lawyers of New England and a founder of the famous Hope Club in Providence. She is a cousin of Mr. Joseph C. Grew, United States Ambassador to Japan.

Miss Fisk's mother, who was Miss Katherine Kendall, of Providence, was first married to Charles W. Fish, who was killed while hunting with the Meadow Brook hounds ten years ago. Miss Fisk was educated at Miss Hewitt's School and at Heathfield, Ascot, England. She studied languages and art in Paris and has traveled abroad a great deal. This winter she has done dramatic sketches on the radio.

Mr. Bingham's father is a financier, yachtsman and explorer. He married in Paris, in 1927, Mrs. Grace Monand Breese, whose first husband was James Lawrence Breese, of New York. The latter were divorced in Paris on July 19, 1927. Bingham's mother was Miss Harriet Gowen, and her marriage to Mr. Bingham took place in 1912. They were divorced in Paris in 1926. Several months later Mrs. Bingham married Mr. G. Harlan Miller, at one time second secretary at the United States Embassy in Paris and private secretary to the late Ambassador Myron T. Herrick. The ceremony was performed in Paris with Ambassador Herrick as best man. Mr. Bingham, sr., is a nephew of the late Col. Oliver Hazard Payne and a cousin of the late Mr. Harry Payne Whitney and the late Mr. Payne Whitney.

The bridegroom-elect is a brother of Mrs. Edward Peerman Moore, who married Lieut. Moore, U. S. N., aviation division, early this month in Arizona. Mr. Bingham attended Taft School and the Boeing School of Aviation in Oakland, Calif.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S something very nice about buying a dress which is the only one of it's kind. And there's something even nicer about not having to pay a small fortune for your exclusive model. This is quite in the realm of possibility if you select a model from among the dozens on display in a small shop hidden in an F street building.

The young woman who owns this shop shows only original designs. She knows a lot about selecting dresses that are particularly suited to the individual and likes nothing better than to help a woman who has difficult style problems find something which makes her unusually chic. She's a great reader of types and a veritable genius for picking out the proper gown to bring out your best qualities.

You'll have no difficulty finding a dress for any occasion in this little shop for its variety is amazing. There are sport clothes, dressy afternoon frocks, cocktail dresses, summer evening dresses, both formal and more or less informal, coats and suits, and in fact any type of dress you will need for the season.

The prices range from $10.75 to $29.50.

Scent to Chase Odors.

What a godsend to the hostess! It's a fragrant fluid which you spray about the room, and presto stale odors, cabbage scents and onion aromas, and even the low lying clouds of cigarette smoke vanish in the bat of any eye.

Once you've tried it you'll never want to give a party without a bottle of this "fresh air" close at hand. Bottle and spray come complete for $1.

Lustrous Hair Alluring.

Styles may change, but soft lustrous hair still retains its power of allure. It is inevitably the stamp of the beautifully groomed woman.

The surest way to make your hair a crowning glory is by brushing—and more brushing. This stimulates the scalp, encourages the hair to grow, keeps it clean and makes it soft and lovely.

Of course choosing the proper type of brush is quite essential. You should have one with bristles sufficiently stiff to penetrate the scalp, so arranged that they sweep through the hair contacting all thicknesses.

You'll find an excellent brush featured in the toilet's goods department of a downtown store. The bristles are arranged in irregular lengths so that they actually brush a wave into the hair and keep a permanent looking like new. Of course it's an old fallacy that brushing the hair was bad for the wave. But it is quite true that the way you brush and the kind of brush you use is highly important in bringing out the beauty of your wave.

Inexpensive Opera Glasses.

It seems preposterous that you could buy a pair of opera glass, together with a little purple velvet bag to carry them, for only 39 cents. But you'll find this unusual bargain in the stationary department of a local store.

During you summer trips about the countryside you'll be glad to have a pair of these far-sighted glasses to lend you bigger and better seeing powers. So, don't wait. Better buy while the buying is good.

What Today Means

"Aries."

IF APRIL 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

You may be making a mistake if you allow visitations from friends to interfere with your plans on this date. Frankness, if used diplomatically, seldom gives offense. If irritated and tempted to make a hasty, as well as sarcastic reply, in response to a question, which probably will be asked, it might be wise to curb your tongue.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those aspiring to become engaged, will avoid complications if before making plans for any form of entertainment, they first consult their mate, betrothed, or sweetheart.

If a woman and April 2 is your birthday, you are a lover of Nature, so probably would be happiest if living in the country or in the suburbs.

The child born on April 2, usually, when it arrives at school age, is inclined to stretch its imagination, on the slightest provocation, in the relating of trivial incidents.

If a man and April 2 is your natal day, if you adjust yourself to present existing conditions, avoiding antiquated methods of the past, you may meet with greater success.

Mrs. Swiggett's Life Work Is the Promotion of Art

Harris & Ewing.

By Malvina Lindsay.

ON A BLUE wall-hanging in the home of Mrs. Samuel A. Swiggett, 701 Nichols avenue, is an arresting stenciled design. At first glance it seems merely a pleasing arrangement of geometric figures. But on closer inspection the lines fall into these words: "Art must make the home, the city, the country, the Nation."

This is no perfunctory "God Bless Our Home" motto. It is an expression of a deeply felt philosophy of life, of a gospel of which Mrs. Swiggett has been an evangel for 30 years.

Herself an artist, Mrs. Swaggett has always scorned to live in an ivory tower. For 25 years she taught—in Indianapolis, Minneapolis, Seattle, other cities—awakening thousands of pupils to the joy of line and color, opening new inner vistas to their parents through the public art movements she fostered. During vacations she would rush away to study, to learn new mediums of expression for her own talents, to follow new art trends. Five years ago, shortly after her marriage, she moved to Washington. "At last," she though, "I shall have time to paint!"

Drafted by Federation.

But the teacher who as Grace Kiess had kept Western and Middle Western cities stirred up over art had preached too long. She could not resist the call of woman's club to speak on her favorite subject. Other women caught her enthusiasm. Other clubs called for her services. And three years ago, just after she had moved into a new home—the curtains still unhung—Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, drafted her to serve as art chairman for the federation.

The curtains remain unhung. Mrs. Swiggett has been too busy with a new goal—stirring up the women's clubs of Washington over art, arousing them to seek for the Nation's Capital the art leadership of America. Working in conformity with the art program of the general Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Swiggett last spring promoted an art contest and exhibition for local artists. Held in the public libraries of Washington, it excited such wide interest that at the conclusion of a month it was held over a second month.

This year the event, sponsored by the arts committee of the District Federation of Women's Clubs and The Washington Post, has grown into the Greater Washington Annual Independent Art Exhibition which will open April 28 in nine department stores.

"As I worked on the library exhibitions of last year," said Mrs. Swiggett, "I evolved the idea that if citizens, merchants, clubs and artists could be welded together by the press, there could be started in Washington a great art movement in which the States might be led to join. The art division in the women's clubs seemed to me an ideal agency through which to project such a plan."

Planned Musical Career.

Fittingly enough, Mrs. Swiggett's own art efforts received their first impetus in an exhibition. When a little girl in the sixth grade of a school near Indianapolis, she was informed one day by her teacher that her maps and her drawings of flowers had been selected to be sent to a State display. Proud though she was, she wept for fear her beloved drawings would not be returned. But even then she did not know that art was to be the dominating interest of her life. She expected to become a violinist and to that end studied four years at the Conservatory of Music in Cincinnati, her native city. But always in her heart was the call to the drawing board and when an injury to her finger prevented her continuing her musical career, she announced happily, "Now I am going to art school."

She studied four years at the Cincinnati Art School, was graduated from the Cincinnati University and studied later at the University of Chicago, Columbia University, the University of New York, the University of Washington (where she also taught) and other schools. Her teachers have included Frank Duveneck, L. H. Meakin, Walter Beck, James Parton Haney, Otto Humann and others.

Promoted Fine Arts Society.

Despite a life given over to arousing art enthusiasm in others, Mrs. Swiggert has found time to do an amazing amount of work herself, to paint in oil and water colors, to stencil, do batik, design and hammer out jewelry, make pottery, weave (which craft she studied under Raymond Duncan, brother of Isadora) and do bookbinding. The paintings on her walls reflect the development of a talent that did not stand still. They range from those in the earlier conservative manner to a modernistic interpretation of the Washington Monument, with a dirigible in the foreground, and include pictures that have been exhibited in the National and the Corcoran Art Galleries.

"I've always tried to move along," she said. Her record shows that she also always tried to take others with her. In Seattle, finding there was no public art movement, she promoted the organization of a Society of Fine Arts and served ten years on its governing board. In Minneapolis she started a handicraft movement for supervisors of drawing. An old house in the downtown section of the city was rented and turned into a workshop and exhibit mart for pottery and leather work. So successful did the project become that business men of Minneapolis formed a holding company and erected a $50,000 building which included a hall for the use of drama groups.

To widen the eddies of art interest has always been Mrs. Swiggett's aim. To her, art is nothing if it is not democratic. "The trouble with most art movements and especially with art galleries," she said, "is that they are removed from the people, that they are centered in remote places where the public will not seek them out. I have always had the feeling that art projects should be carried forward with the thought of the greatest good to the greatest number, and I have tried to work in that direction.

Hears From Former Pupils.

"I know there are those who say we should not commercialize art. But we can not help doing so. We can not eat, we can not work, we can not live without art's being a part of what we are doing. My work with teaching has made me see art as a part of civilized life and has made me feel that it must not be lost. Since the depression especially I have felt that a great art movement should be started to save art from dying. For the loss of art to the world means back to barbarism."

Because she has felt so deeply that "art must save the home, the city, the country, the Nation," Mrs. Swiggett has put its promulgation first in her life. Today one of her greatest satisfactions is the number of letters she receives from former pupils who through her learned the satisfaction of creative interest. One, a physician, writes her he is building a studio. Another, a business man, tells her his paintings are to be hung in an exhibit. Still another, a housewife, relates her experiences in beautifying her home by her own handiwork.

It is not hard to understand why this should be so. Any listener hearing this enthusiastic gray-haired woman talk, watching the eager flush in her face, feels momentarily that nothing is so important as to dash away, grab a brush or mallet, draw, paint, hammer silver, mold clay, gaze at a painting or a sculpture, or in some way capture a little of the beauty that lies so luxuriantly around.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: We have a son and daughter, 15 and 17, respectively, who have always seemed to be good, obedient, truthful children. But last week an incident happened which completely upset their father and me. It was a small enough thing in itself, but it has serious implications to us.

• • • •

The two, who are great chums, asked permission to go to a show promising to be home around half past 10. At quarter of 11 our son came in, looking rather apologetic, and said his sister had decided to spend the night with her girl chum, whom they had met at the show with her parents.

• • • •

We thought this rather queer, since she could have telephoned us about it, and she had never done anything just like that before. However, we said little, and went to bed.

• • • •

At 1:30 the doorbell began ringing and it was our daughter, with the girl friend whose name had been mentioned, and two boys we knew. My husband who answered the door didn't say anything until they had gone. Then he demanded an explanation. She began to cry and said she had met the three at her friend's house earlier in the evening and they had gone for a drive, promising to meet her brother in front of the theater at 10 o'clock. It seems he waited around for half an hour and when they didn't come he came on home and gave the most protective explanation he could.

• • • •

According to his sister, what happened was this: They were going to drive to a near-by city and back, and about 15 miles out of the city had trouble with the car. They tried to flag passing cars, but had no success, and finally had to walk about 3 miles to a filling station. They called a garage and waited almost an hour before help came. Then they found the car had to be towed in, and they rode back to the filling station and called a taxicab. It was another long wait before that arrived, and although they came directly home from there, it was 1:30 when they got in.

• • • •

Both our daughter and her brother told us, when closely questioned, this is the first time they have ever deceived us. We have tried to devise a punishment to fit the crime, and have denied them any more nights out, unless we are along, until school closes. Do you think that is fair and wise? But both my husband and I are heartbroken and baffled by what we have learned.

• • • •

How do you account for such deception and such cheap conduct on the part of our daughter, when we have always been fair and honorable in our dealings with them and with each other, and have tried to instill in them a respect for the old-fashioned virtues of truthfulness, obedience, regular hours and general decency? Can it be we have failed in some respects to be good parents? GRIEVED.

Understanding Needed.

DEAR GRIEVED: It may be you've given your children too many objective principles to live up to; and not enough laughter and fun, not enough warm, sympathetic love and comradely understanding. It may be that without meaning to, you've made it seem a sin to want to be independent and lighthearted and socially popular in the perfectly wholesome and natural way of youth.

• • • •

You may have presented truthfulness, obedience, regular hours and general decency in such guise that they seem grim-visaged, unattainable virtues. It would almost inevitably follow, in that case, that your children would band together in mutually sensed human imperfection, not only to conceal their distaste for your preachments, but their inability to meet your standard fully; that they would intuitively cooperate in seeking some way around the situation.

• • • •

Evidently your daughter has courage, to have taken such a risk. That her brother understood her motives and forgave her deception, even while fearing the consequences of her recklessness, was shown by his desire to aid and shield her in it. He must have known it was an innocent episode, intrinsically, since brothers are always stern watchdogs of their sister's virtue.

• • • •

Rather than curtail your children's social activities, it would be wiser, in my opinion, to encourage them to make their own home a gathering place for their friends. You must realize, without my saying so, that parents have failed in understanding and friendship for their children when the latter conspire against them in seeking the company of contemporaries. M. When to Salt Meat Is Simple Cooking Rule

Season Roast Before It Is Put in Oven; Steak Method Different.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THIS QUESTION of when to salt meat need not be a difficult problem. Salt does a great deal to enhance the flavor of meat when added at the correct time. The correct time is the secret and one that is easily remembered.

A roast is salted before entering the oven, because though salt, when applied to meat, draws out the juices, the roast is thick enough to retain the greater part of its juices, and the part that is lost will be rescued in the bottom of the pan and used in making gravy.

Steak is treated just the opposite when it comes to salting. In fact, the time for salting steak depends largely upon the length of time it is to be cooked. Those who like their steak very rare will place it under the flame to sear and then apply just a smattering of salt and pepper to the cooked side. The steak is then turned for searing on the other side and taken from the flame and salt and pepper applied to the second surface. For a very rare steak the searing time is enough cooking. A steak that is cooked until medium or well done is first seared on one side and then the other and turned frequently until cooked. This steak, as well as chops, should be salted after removing from the flame to insure the retention of all possible juice.

Other Inquiries Follow.

Question—Can I follow a general rule for cooking vegetables in a small or large amount of water?

Answer—Fresh young vegetables will cook quickly and need only a small amount of water. Spinach, swiss chard and other tender leafy greens should be cooked in their own juices. The water which clings to their leaves after washing will be sufficient to keep them from scorching if the heat is kept low and the kettle covered, for this type is cooked by the steam created. Less loss of important food value is the result of this type of cookery.

Among the vegetables that should be cooked in as small amount of boiling water as possible are peas, young carrots, celery, tomatoes and squash. The food value which is extracted during the cooking may be regained if the water in which the vegetables are cooked is used for sauce or soup.

Vegetables that need to be covered with boiling water are ones that, with the exception of corn, asparagus and artichokes, take a longer period of cooking. This group includes potatoes, beets, parsnips, lima beans and wax or green beans.

The stronger vegetables, those which may be of the onion or cabbage family, are cooked in a large amount of boiling water. The flavor of these vegetables will be more palatable if cooked in large amounts of water and cooked only until tender.

Question—Will you, please, give me a different recipe for pudding which may be served with equal success to children and adults?

Answer—Try this peach tapioca. It may be made either with canned or fresh peaches, so it will be just as successful next summer as it is now.

Peach Tapioca.

4 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
1 cup peach juice, fresh or canned
½ cup water
1-3 cup sugar
1 teaspoon butter
6 halves peaches, fresh or canned, forced through a sieve
1 egg white, stiffly beaten
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup orange juice
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Add tapioca, salt and fruit juices to water. Cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add sugar. Pour small amount of tapioca mixture over egg yolk, stirring vigorously. Return to double boiler and cook 3 to 4 minutes longer, or until thickened. Remove from fire. Add butter, lemon juice and peach pulp. Fold a small amount into egg white. Add to remaining tapioca mixture and blend. Chill. Serves six.

Dorothea Duncan will be glad to help you with your culinary problems. Write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Jumpers Suited for Sports, Street Wear or Matinee

Pattern No. 892.

GIRLS of all ages love jumpers, and this is one they will even love to make. Worn by itself, it makes a carefree frock for sports, with roomy square armholes. Double kick pleats give scope for active legs. The front fastens with laces or buttons. Worn with the frilly, puff-sleeved blouse, and minus the patch pockets, it looks demure and ladylike for street or matinee. Lots of jumper-type girls make their dresses in the summer time—it is so easy with the big instruction chart that comes with every pattern. This one is made in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38, and in a 39-inch material, size 16 (34) requires 3¼ yards for the jumper and 2¼ yards for the blouse.

Permanent Cure of Psychosis Possible With Proper Treatment

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Psychoses are Curable.

MENTAL and nervous diseases have no doubt existed throughout the entire history of the human family. Hippocrates, the ancient Greek physician, was the first to describe epilepsy with some care and to divorce it from its superstitious origin. It was not, however, until the beginning of the nineteenth century that physicians began to look upon mental illness as something just as definite as physical illness, although there might be no demonstrable changes in the brain or the nervous system.

The psychoses contribute some of the most puzzling problems with which the physician is compelled to deal. If there are positive change in the nervous system which account for the disordered nervous state we say that the disease is organic. If no lesion is found we call the psychosis functional.

We may then ask what is a psychosis? The answer is that a psychosis is a state of mind in which the individual is partially or largely out of tune with his fellow men and with the environment in which he lives. He may not see eye to eye with any one. On the other hand, a person may be suffering from a psychosis and live to a good old age and function efficiently in almost any community.

In combating psychoses, psychotherapy attempts to correct the attitude of the patient toward himself and his environment.

"Electricity for All"

Goal of the Electrical Industry if given Fair Treatment and a Square Deal

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has recognized the possibilities for social benefit and economic recovery of a rapid expansion of electric service to the American people. This has been the constant objective of electrical utilities for 50 years, and has inspired the building of systems that now serve 25,000,000 customers.

It is still the goal of electrical men and the industry is eager and competent to go forward. It can do this only if it receives friendly support and encouragement from the government and the public. Incessant political attacks, subsidized competition, destructive legislation and discriminatory taxation make impossible the social and economic contributions always visualized by the utilities and the other branches of the electrical industry. These hindrances are not warranted and are not in the public interest.

The electrical industry has a background of a half century of progress and experience in electrification. It knows how to bring within reach the goals stated by the President and welcomes a chance to expand its facilities and services in response to popular interest in the uses of electricity and to the eagerness of the administration to hasten the day when every home and farm will have electrical aids and conveniences. It has already built a power supply and a degree of electrification unparalleled in the world and wishes to continue this program.

For the information of official Washington, in their study of the utilities, the facts about the electrical industry have been marshalled—its past record of growth, the details of the business, the policies and organizations used and its vision of a broader service. These data are in the Recovery Number of Electrical World.

A messenger will deliver this volume tomorrow to every member of Congress, and to leading officials of the Administration who are being called on, or are likely to be called on to make a decision in regard to the vital matter of a further electrification of this country.

We urge you to give this volume your careful consideration—to give it, in addition, a place in your library of important reference works. You will find between its covers the record and the facts about the electrical industry. You will find what the industry has done and can still do.

This number is a service to the industry contributed by Electrical World on its own initiative in a constructive endeavor to show the facts about the electrical business, to show what the industry can do to stimulate business recovery, to make possible an understanding of the industry so that it may go forward with the cooperation and support of the government. This industry asks only for fair treatment in order to continue its striving for a better, happier, more prosperous, completely-electrified America.

To Official Washington:

ON YOUR DESK TOMORROW

NATIONAL RECOVERY NUMBER of ELECTRICAL WORLD

Gives the Facts About the Industry and a Plan for Recovery

RECOVERY PROGRAM	INDUSTRY FACTS
1. A million people given work	1. Investment
2. A total business volume of $16,500,000,000	2. Organization and policy
3. Added annual payroll of $1,030,000,000	3. Past record
4. Broader and more intense electrification	4. Rates, taxes
5. Great stimulus to all durable goods	5. Costs and Returns

This program can be carried out if fair treatment is given to the industry. The case of the industry is placed in your hands in order to make it possible for it to go forward.

Nice, Reluctant, Signs Bill on Receipts Tax To Meet Relief Needs

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., April 1.—Gov. Harry W. Nice this afternoon signed the bill imposing a 1 per cent tax on gross retail receipts, enacted as a compromise measure in the State's campaign for a relief program to meet demands of Federal authorities.

His action relieved the tenseness that hung over the General Assembly on this, the closing day of its biennial 90-day session.

The Governor acted only after he realized the situation was hopeless so far as getting the Legislature together on some other proposal. He had been an advocate from the outset of the 2 per cent consumers' sales tax as a means to meet relief demands and approved the gross receipts tax with "reluctance," having deferred action since Saturday, when he announced he wanted to give the Assembly an opportunity to agree on a more satisfactory solution.

Move Is Blocked.

Early today a bloc of Senators, headed by Milton L. Veasey, Worcester County, felt that the way had been cleared to give a new lease of life to the sales tax, but the shortness of time, jeopardizing many other important measures still in the files of Senate and House, coupled with difficulty in obtaining sufficient votes to suspend rules, loomed as obstacles too great to overcome. Also, several senators who have stoutly opposed the sales tax threatened a filibuster if any move to revive the sales tax measure was attempted.

Gov. Nice opposed the 1 per cent gross tax on the ground it will not produce sufficient revenue for relief and old-age pensions. It is estimated to yield not more than $5,000,000, whereas the calculation of the consumers' tax was a maximum of $8,000,000, of which $4,500,000 would have been for relief and $1,500,000 for old-age pensions, the basis of a promise made by State and legislative officials to the Federal authorities several weeks ago.

The gross tax measure became operative today and will remain in effect a year. A special session of the Assembly next January may be necessary to continue relief legislation.

Mass of Work.

With the relief snarl adjusted, the General Assembly was enabled to wade into the vast accumulation of legislative matters, including many important State-wide proposals and scores of bills of interest to the counties and Baltimore City, in order to make final adjournment consistent with constitutional provisions. Many of these bills still reposed in committees.

It was reported during the day that many of the group of administration measures probably would die in committees, but with the situation cleared, legislative machinery was speeded and indications tonight were that few, if any, proposals of consequence would go by the boards in the jam.

One of the first administration bills to be rushed through was the old-age pension bill introduced by Senator J. David Baile, Carroll County, minority floor leader of the Senate. Other measures to clear all channels in course of the day and now ready for the Governor included:

Joint resolution requesting Congress to appropriate funds to the United States Bureau of Fisheries for a survey of Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries with regard to spawning, migration and other habits of fish.

Joint resolution requesting the State roads commission and Federal bureau of highways to improve the road from Havre de Grace to Delaware.

Resolution directing the public service commission to investigate rates charged by utilities companies in Cecil County.

Bill continuing under jurisdiction of the State roads commission the distribution of the gasoline tax funds for lateral roads in the counties. The county commissioners' association made a strong fight to have such funds diverted to the counties.

Increasing the powers and broadening duties of the State board of aids and charities.

Creating a new Maryland veterans' relief commission of five, consisting of the adjutant general and representatives of the four major national veterans' organizations. The commission would appoint a service officer to handle veterans' claims and affairs. A budget appropriation of $95,000 has been made for the commission, with the stipulation that not more than $20,000 be spent for administration and salaries.

Bills to continue the land laws commission and authorize the Governor to appoint a commission to study occupational diseases.

Giving the State aviation commission jurisdiction over all airports, landing fields and air beacons.

Authorizing Hartford County to issue $750,000 bonds.

Bond issue of $170,000 for Kent County for general purposes.

The House killed the bill that would have transferred operation of the Cheltenham Reform School for Colored Boys in Prince Georges County to the State and changed its name to the Maryland Training School for Colored Boys. The vote was 65 to 42.

Slated to die in the House was the bill authorizing a bond issue of $2,000,000 for a municipal power plant for Cumberland. Powerful business interests of Cumberland have fought against this proposal the last few days. The bill, by Senator Robert Kimble, Allegany County, passed the Senate.

Fund Method Worries FERA in Maryland

Baltimore, April 1. (AP).—With a $1,681,000 program all lined up on paper for April, Federal Relief authorities in Maryland today were worried over possible trouble because of the State's method of raising relief money.

"I've been talking with Washington and they're not at all pleased down there," said one official, who asked that his name not be used. "The State has guaranteed to raise $5,000,000 and Washington isn't convinced that the retail gross receipts tax will do it."

In the office of Harry Greenstein, FERA director here, it was said no allotment had been received today. The money requested—$1,681,000—is $69,000 less than was received in March, and $71,022 more than the amount called for in February's program.

Two Sent to Jail As Still Operators

Fines Also Levied in Trial at Winchester.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 1.—For the first time in months, a still was brought into court here today and when Trial Justice A. J. Tavenner had inspected it and heard the evidence, Edward Lee Dehaven, 20, was found guilty of three charges, two of them carrying a fine in addition to a jail penalty.

On a charge of driving while drunk, he was sentenced to 30 days jail and fined $100. On a charge of possession of three pints of illegal liquor he was sentenced to a month, and on a charge of possession of a still, he was sentenced to a month in jail, fined $100 and required to post bond of $1,000 not to violate the liquor laws for one year.

John P. Thomas was found guilty of joint possession of the still and was fined $100 and sentenced to four months in jail. The two men were arrested in a truck near Clearbrook by State Officer R. E. Bayliss. The still was found in the truck.

Conference in Virginia To Study Women's Work

Williamsburg, Va., April 1 (AP).—Six speakers at the fourth annual vocational guidance conference, to be held at the Wren Building at William and Mary College tomorrow, will discuss professions of particular interest to women. The meeting is sponsored by the local branch of the American Association of University Women.

Recovers From Mystery Shot.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 1.—Marshall Harness, Petersburg, W. Va., who was taken to Memorial Hospital Thursday with a gunshot wound in the abdomen, returned yesterday to his home. Harness declared he did not know who his assailant was but said he was fishing and as he crossed an open field he was struck by the shot.

West Virginia Reports Gain In Industries

Relief Rolls Rise to 30 Per Cent Despite Better Business.

End of First Quarter Shows Factories at Capacity.

By Robert H. Horner.
A Special Correspondent.

Charleston, W. Va., April 1.—The end of the first quarter of 1935 found West Virginia's industries working almost at capacity, showing also a general pickup in all lines of business except construction. This improved condition was cited by the State Labor Department in a report.

The Labor Department reported in addition that many plants are taking on additional employes and increasing the size of their plants.

This is particularly true in the Kanawha Valley, which, except for an almost total lack of construction work, is producing above-normal outputs from its glass and chemical plants.

Dams Being Built.

The only important construction work now under way in the Kanawha Valley is on the two hydro-electric power plants the Kanawha Valley Power Co., subsidiary of the American Gas & Electric Co., is building at the Government's new Marmet and London dams in the Kanawha River east of Charleston, at a cost of $5,000,000.

Plans are under way for much new construction work to begin about June 1 at the Blaine Island plant of the Carbide & Carbon Chemicals Corporation at South Charleston. The Westvaco Chlorine Products Corporation, also at South Charleston, will enlarge its plant proportionately in order to maintain its supply of chlorine for the larger plant.

Charleston, center of banking for the Kanawha Valley's industries, shows about a 10 per cent increase in local retail business since January 1 over same period of 1934. Local bank debits for the quarter show an increase of 27 per cent the first quarter of 1934. The debits through Charleston's banks at the close of the quarter amounted to $132,607,222, compared with a total of $103,981,137 at the end of the first three months of 1934.

Relief Figures Up.

In spite of the showing in West Virginia business, the number of persons on relief rolls has increased from 20 per cent of the State's population to 30 per cent of the population, according to W. N. Beehler, State relief administrator.

The West Virginia Relief Administration board will meet Monday to begin a survey with the view of taking off relief rolls persons who show an unwillingness to go to work on the farms, which are said to be demanding help.

1,400 to Participate In Music Festival

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 1.—More than 1,400 elementary school children will take part in a music festival at the State Armory May 10. Teachers in every elementary school in the county are training their pupils for the event. A program is being prepared by Miss Drucilla Worthington, elementary supervisor.

One group of about 250 children will present rhythmic exercises from one-room schools. Two, three, four and five room schools will have their parts in the program. The festival theme will be folk music. In the second part there will be folk dances and rhythmic work. The festival will be Frederick's contribution for national music week and will bring together children of every elementary school in the county.

Virginia Bootlegger's Conviction Is Upheld

John W. Rosser, of Lynchburg, Va., must serve five years and pay $8,000 fine on conviction of bootlegging liquor. The Supreme Court refused yesterday to review the conviction, the Associated Press reported.

On November 5, 1934, he was arrested near a truck containing 465 gallons of liquor in five-gallon cans. Mr. and Mrs. Willie C. Carroll also were arrested. Rosser and Carroll were convicted and Mrs. Carroll was found not guilty. The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals approved Rosser's conviction.

Middletown to Be Host To Mission Society

By the Associated Press.

Middletown, Md., April 1.—The Rev. David S. Baker, pastor of St. Paul's Reformed Church, of Baltimore, will be one of the principal speakers at the twenty-first annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Maryland Classis of the Evangelical Reformed Church of the United States here Thursday.

More than 150 delegates are expected to attend the meeting in Christ Reformed Church. Mrs. Maurice D. Coblentz, of Middletown, president of the society, will be in charge of the sessions.

Missing Boy

Searchers at Covington, Va., have almost abandoned hope here of finding 4-year-old Frank (Sonny) Rose (above), missing from his home near here since Thursday. Bloodhounds have tracked the child to the banks of the Jackson River but dragging has brought no trace of him.

Mission Group Gathers May 4 In Cumberland

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 1.—For the first time in the history of the Baltimore Archdiocese, Cumberland will play host to a diocesan mission convention on May 4, 5 and 6, when members of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade, and the Students Mission Union will meet in Carroll Hall. With the western Maryland local conference there will be large delegations from the conferences in Baltimore and Washington, students in the various schools of those cities.

The Rev. Louis C. Vaeth, of Baltimore, director of the crusade, brought a committee from Washington to confer with the committee here in Cumberland.

Activities will include the finale of the diocesan oratorical contest.

With Father Vaeth here were the Rev. Marcullus Fuller, O. M. Cap; the Rev. Thomas Fitzpatrick, C. S. C.; Brother E. Anthony, F. S. C.; the Misses Anna Naughton and Kathleen Moriarty, all of Washington, and Miss Helen Morningstar and Charles Kelly, Baltimore, chairman of the committee of the local conferences in those cities.

The committees will meet again April 9 when the crusade director and his staff from Washington will visit Cumberland.

Shooting Victim Is Buried in W.Va.

Neighbor, Wounded, May Face Charges in Death.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Parsons, W. Va., April 1.—Leslie Collins, 45, Lanesville farmer and FERA worker, victim of a shooting at Lanesville Thursday, was buried yesterday afternoon. No inquest was held.

Prosecuting Attorney A. G. Bolton indicated charges will be preferred against Grant Roy, 29, a neighbor of the dead man, as soon as Roy is able to leave a hospital here.

Roy is recovering from a bullet wound in the back. Mrs. Hazel Roy, 24, his wife, who suffered a bullet wound in the breast, is still in a critical condition in the hospital. The shooting is said to have followed a dispute over a boundary line.

Historic City Asks Moving Of Hospital

Group Behind Restoration of Williamsburg Favors Change.

Plans Call for Hotel to Replace State Institution.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., April 1.—The Rockefeller interests, prime movers in the Williamsburg restoration, have proposed to Virginia that the Commonwealth eventually move its Eastern State Hospital to a farm outside the city limits, it was learned authoritatively today.

Officials of the institutions concerned said details of the transaction had not yet taken definite form.

Conditional upon assurance from the State that the hospital for mental patients will be removed, the restoration will erect a hotel costing from $500,000 to $750,000 near the site of the institution, it is understood.

Would Contribute Fund.

The restoration would contribute a substantial sum toward the cost of moving the hospital—an operation which could be conducted one unit a a time, according to proposed plans.

Gov. Peery has had the proposal before him, it is known, but has withheld action until he determines whether any Federal funds can be used on the project.

Dr. George W. Brown, superintendent of the hospital, said today the matter had been discussed at a board meeting, but that nothing definite had come of it. As soon as decisive action is taken, he said, the plans will be made public.

Patients' Moving Reported.

Reports have been current in Williamsburg for some time that a dormitory for so-called "noisy" patients would be built on Dunbar's farm on the iron-bound road to Jamestown, which the hospital owns and to which it daily transports its patients for farming purposes.

Although power lines are available now, no water or sewerage system is available for several miles. These facilities would have to be constructed before any move could be made, it was pointed out here.

The removal of the entire hospital is not contemplated immediately, but hope has been expressed in some quarters that part of the institution may be removed to the farm during next summer.

Milk Commission Will Meet Today

Court Decides Virginia Board Constitutional.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 1.—J. Stuart Agnew, of Burkeville, chairman of the State milk commission whose constitutional status was assured by decision of the Supreme Court Friday, announced here today that the board's meeting had been deferred from today until tomorrow.

Other members are Kone Brugh, of Nace, and Dr. Tipton R. Snavely, of the University of Virginia. The agency has been inactive since the Supreme Court declared the act creating the commission unconstitutional in November, only to order a rehearing in March, the result of which was a reversal of the former opinion.

Peery Motors to Capital.

Richmond, Va., April 1 (AP).—Gov. Peery motored to Washington today on business matters connected with Washington and Lee University, of which he is a board member.

Dr. Hoxton, Virginia U., Named Head of New Physicists' Group

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 1.—Dr. Llewellyn G. Hoxton, head of the physics department at the University of Virginia, was elected the first president of the Southeastern Association of Physicists at an organization meeting held at Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Hoxton, a past president of the Virginia Academy of Science, is a fellow of the American Physical Society and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He also is a member of the American Astronomical Society and other national scientific organizations.

Other officers chosen at the Atlanta meeting, which was attended by more than 100 physicists from 20 Southern colleges and universities, are: Prof. A. A. Bless, of the University of Florida, vice president; Prof. C. W. Edwards, of Duke University, secretary, and Prof. W. S. Nelms, of Emory University, treasurer. Prof. A. E. Ruark, of the University of North Carolina, and Prof. A. C. Carsen, of the University of South Carolina, were elected to the executive committee.

200 Attend Recital Over Artist's Protest

By a Staff Correspondent.

Cumberland, Md., April 1.—In spite of warnings to people to stay away from his Bach recital yesterday afternoon at B'er Chayim Temple, John S. Gridley had an audience of more than 200 interested music lovers. No one was admitted without a ticket, the recital being an invitation affair in honor of the 250th anniversary of the birth of Johann Sebastian Bach.

Mr. Gridley, in a letter to those invited, warned them that there was to be no moving around, no talking and no leaving during the more than two hours of organ music. The doors were locked at one minute before 3 and no one could enter or leave after that time.

"I would rather have ten truly interested auditors than a thousand people who might be bored," said Mr. Gridley.

2 Dams Planned At Parsons, W. Va.

Structures Will Be Part of Recreation Campaign.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Parsons, W. Va., April 1.—Plans are under way for the building of two large dams in the nearby rural section of this county, which will be used for the conservation of fish, swimming, boating and other recreational activities.

John Duemler, topographic engineer of the United States Geological Survey, Washington, has arrived to survey a site on Clover Run near the Harper farm, about 6 miles from Parsons, and another site on Horseshoe Run, near Leadmine.

The Clover dam will be built first, he said. Construction work will be done by CCC workers.

Road Worker Hurt by Car.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 1.—Twenty-seven stitches were required to close wounds in the face of William L. Roach, 35, of Swift Run, State highway worker, who was struck this afternoon by an automobile driven by W. P. Swartz, sr., Rockingham County inspector of weights and measures. The accident occurred while Roach was working on the Elkton pike at Montevideo, ten miles east of here.

Auto Accidents Kill 3 Persons; 8 Are Injured

Baltimore Woman Victim of Hit-Run Driver; 2 Die in Crashes.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 1.—Automobile accidents in the State during the last 48 hours tonight had resulted in death to three persons and injuries to eight others.

Frederick Bloom, 22, Baltimore, and Oscar Carey, 43, Salisbury, were fatally injured in crashes respectively, yesterday, near Pocomoke City and Salisbury.

Mrs. Estelle Hunt, 57, of Baltimore, died in a hospital here, a victim of a hit-and-run driver. Police have arrested Louis Roch, 27, as the driver of the machine which struck Mrs. Hunt.

New Postmaster Begins His Duties

Motter Succeeds Biser at Frederick, Md.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 1.—After serving 12 years as postmaster here Irving S. Biser, Republican, was succeeded to day by Guy K. Motter, former magistrate and member of the Frederick bar, Democrat. The change was made without ceremony, Motter having been appointed acting postmaster by Postmaster General Farley several weeks ago, pending the arrival of his commission for the four-year term, expected shortly.

Thursday night the Service Relations Council will honor Biser at a banquet.

Patrick M. Schnauffer, Republican, has been recommended by the Republican State committee to succeed Motter as magistrate. Biser, who rose in the service, will retire on pension.

Wyatt, Shot by His Son, In Serious Condition

Chestertown, Md., April 1 (AP).—Sheriff John N. Bennett was informed today Norman Wyatt, of Massey, Md., remained in a serious condition at Easton Emergency Hospital from a gunshot wound in the head.

Massey was shot by James Stewart, 16, an adopted son. Stewart is being held in the Kent County Jail here pending the outcome of Wyatt's injuries.

Three Rivals Present Test For Jackson

Size of Primary Vote Today Expected to Figure in Result.

G. O. P. Selects Randall to Run for Mayoralty in Baltimore.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 1.—The fate of the four Democratic candidates in Baltimore's mayoralty race tonight seemed to hinge on the size of the vote in tomorrow's primary.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson, seeking a third four-year term, faced stern competition from Charles E. Moylan, William I. Norris and John H. Ferguson for the party's nomination.

There was no contest in the Republican ranks. This party's standard bearer is Blanchard Randall, jr., selected two weeks ago by G. O. P. leaders after a conference with Gov. Nice. He will clash with the Democratic nominee in an election next month.

At the Jackson headquarters it was deemed essential that the voters turn out in large numbers to assure victory for the mayor's ticket. Observers commented that the campaign had been directed principally at the taxpayer and the Jackson adherents are counting heavily on the nonpolitical vote.

Indications that the balloting would be heavy were seen in the widespread interest manifest in all the districts.

Interest also was keen in each sector in the battle between the major factions for the city council nominations.

Virginia Schools Cut Fund Needs

Ickes Figure of $951,821 Is Pared $350,000.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 1.—Although a report released by Secretary Ickes states that Virginia schools need $951,821 to operate for their customary terms this session, only slightly more than $600,000 has been asked of the Federal Government for this purpose, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, said today.

The report probably was based on figures gathered by the State department of education and furnished to Secretary Ickes last fall, Dr. Hall said. Since then adjustments have been made and the estimates reduced.

According to the report, Virginia had 2,945 schools needing emergency aid. They served 230,018 pupils with 3,985 teachers.

City Will Appeal Suit Seeking Water for Home

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 1.—The suit of Joseph A. Schriver and wife against the mayor and city council of Cumberland seeking to compel the city to supply water to their home above Braddock road on Haystack Mountain, which resulted in a judgment in favor of the defendants, will be taken to the court of appeals.

The city contended Schriver knew when they bought the home that it was supplied by a private water system. The city contended also that to extend its mains would require a considerable expenditure for a special pumping system.

Roberts Resigns Virginia Post.

Richmond, Va., April 1 (AP).—H. K. Roberts, assistant director of parks for the State conservation and development commission, has resigned to accept a place as Federal assistant director of parks for the region of Georgia, and neighboring States, it became known here today.

If "A Midsummer Night's Dream" Is a "Road Show" It Will be a Modern Marvel

Hint Is Afloat Film Will Have High-Scale Run

Critics Just Missed Treat; Research Bureau Started; Chatter of Amusements.

By Nelson B. Bell.

One hears that the Warner Borthers are giving serious consideration to the project of releasing their picturization of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," supervised by the brilliant and distinguished Max Reinhardt, making his debut in the field of the cinema, as a "road show" attraction.

This is an interesting and hazardous suggestion. Those whose memories go back a few years in celluloid entertainment will recall that a "road show" picture was one which was deemed so far superior to its contemporaries as to justify two performances a day—instead of the customary five or six, on the habitual "movie" all-day "grind" policy—at "regular theater" prices.

The mere fact that a film was "road-showed" was prima facie evidence that it was of sufficient worth to attract large and discriminating audiences to theaters usually dedicated to the living drama.

The first real one of these, of course, was David Wark Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation"—although, in a minor way, such things as "Quo Vadis," "The Last Days of Pompeii" and several others, mostly of foreign production, had attempted the grand gesture.

Are Few and Far Between.

There haven't been many "road show" films these later days. There are commanding reasons why there have not been. Foremost among these, I should say, is the fact that the average level of excellence of the regular screen releases has become so high that for a picture to stand out sufficiently to be presented twice daily, at $1 or more top, while other releases are playing five and six shows a day, at a scale of prices ranging, on an average, from 40 to 60 cents, it has to be a film of almost supernatural qualities and superhuman achievement.

Perhaps that is precisely what "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is. That, at least, is what it will have to be!

One needs only to hark back a few years to arrive at the period in the development of the screen and its entertainment when the public would have welcomed as a "road show" attraction almost any of the pictures currently on view in the cinemagogues of the Capital.

Whether there is any such thing at this juncture as a "road show" picture I very much doubt. Perhaps the Warners and Herr the good Prof. Reinhardt will determine the matter once and for all.

Get Out Your Pencil.

This is what it works out to, statistically, from the standpoint of the local exhibition of celluloid drama. "A Midsummer Night's Dream," playing, say, at the National, two performances a day, in a week might present itself to a maximum of slightly more than 50,000 patrons. The competitive attractions at the Fox and Earle, to select two arbitrary examples of large-capacity, first-run houses, in the same length of time, could be seen by 119,000 and 85,000—the difference being represented by an approximate 1,000-seat difference in capacity.

But they do say that "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is an extraordinarily fine production and will be hailed as a burst of magnificence of which even Will Shakespeare might be proud and by which he might even be slightly staggered, his own productions having been what they were.

So, after all, the ayes may have it.

And another thing about "A Midsummer Night's Dream." It now appears that the character of Mrs. Bottom, added to the Bard's original cast of characters, has been found just a bit redundant and in the final cutting has been delicately deleted. Perhaps, after all, Shakespeare knew best!

This is the film, incidentally, which was to have afforded a trainload of a few hundred of the country's foremost critics an opportunity to journey to Hollywood as guests of the Warners and the Herr Professor. This would have been the most important rail caravan fostered by the Warner Brothers since their memorable "Forty-Second Street Special," that arrived here the morning of Franklin D. Roosevelt's inauguration and disgorged its precious cargo to march in the inaugural parade—including Tom Mix and his trick horse.

But the filming of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" ran out before the junket could be organized and that was that.

As I have said before, if some kind soul were pouring beer into the instruments of a band, I would be playing either the piccolo or the cymbals! But they say later, maybe, on some other big one.

Washington Leaps to Aid.

A research service to furnish American motion picture producers with accurate and authentic information regarding historical films from the vast resources contained in the Library of Congress and other United States Government archives has been established in Washington, it is announced here today.

The moving picture research work will be in charge of Catherine Palmer Mitchell, who, during the past five years has been on the staff of the "Dictionary of American Biography" as a research worker in the Library of Congress. Miss Mitchell expects to visit Hollywood shortly to confer with moving picture authorities pertaining to historical accuracy in film productions.

Here Is the Plan.

The new film research organization, known as the Capital Screen-Research Service, headed by Frances Millington, makes the following statement regarding its aims and functions:

"While the motion picture producers for a number of years have endeavored to maintain a high order of authenticity in their sets, backgrounds, and historical facts, there has never been one central agency that they could turn to for such material. Our organization is equipped, through its trained staff of researchers, to supply information from the Congressional Library and other Government archives concerning historical personages, situations, scenes, events, period architecture, costumes, customs, music, and social conditions needed in the filming of plays where historical facts are involved."

Here, understandably, Mr. Sidney Skolsky and his "Movie Boners Club," for easy familiarity with which you are commended to another column on this page, might find the solution of their quest for the so-far unearthed "picture without a flaw"—if ever there is to be such a thing. That there will be, seems to fall well within the purposes of the newly formed research organization.

Those who pretend to keep abreast of the press devoting itself at all to the theater are beginning to wonder if the opening date of the National Theater Players may again be deferred to some time after April 29, to which it was moved from the originally announced April 22.

This curiosity is aroused by the suggestion that the Earl of Carroll is coming back to the races with a new "Vanities," which will be his eleventh edition of his brash gaucherie.

It appears that Ken Murray still is down for the spot of head man in this enterprise of Mr. Carroll's, with a large cast and chorus in support—"Through these portals pass the most beautiful girls in the world, remember?"—will have its dances staged by Boots McKenna and settings designed by Clark Robinson.

The point of all this is that the new "Vanities" is announced to open either in Washington—that would be here—or Boston, on April 29. So what?

Lobbing a Few Into Lobby.

One hesitates to think that most of the entertainment these next few weeks is going to be in the lobbies of Loew's Fox Theater, but that almost is the implication of the snowstorm of bulletins descending upon my desk from the loquacious Mr. Lou Brown and his associates in Loew's loewcal publicity department.

For example, one of the most interesting exhibitions of aviation pictures, models and accessories is now being displayed in the lobby as a promotional gesture in behalf of the coming, on Friday, of Wallace Beery to the screen in "West Point of the Air." This includes photo enlargements and insignia of the United States Army Air Service and important contributions by the Pan-American Airways.

Loew's Fox Theater's fourth annual display of model garden and floral decorations will be installed in the lobbies on Friday of this week. This display is made possible through the cooperation of local florists and the Washington Better Housing Campaign Committee, headed by J. K. Gilchrist. An added feature of this lobby exhibit this year will be a special section of model homes and communities.

Then, when "Spirit of 1935" get to town, one of the diverting lobby distractions will be "The Girl in the Goldfish Bowl." There might be some excuse for a modest skepticism with regard to the house statement that when you look at this 8-inch goldfish bowl, what you see is a living model 5 feet tall!

All mirrors, or something, probably.

So, when Bert Granoff arose in the orchestra pit at the Earle yesterday and started to sing "April Showers," did he get a laugh? It was pouring outside. By close examination it was not violets.

Reassurance Note.

I wouldn't fool you about it—not even today—regardless of Bert.

Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 24 scenes, with Joe Forte, Al Hillier, Joe Devlin, Jack Montague, Billy Mimin, Jack Richards, Dolly Hendricks, Dorothy Wahl, Ann Mitchell, Nora Ford, Rita Zane and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Flaig; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Just as yesterday's weather was nothing to advance the reputation of Washington's spring climate, so "Cupid's Carnival" is just another show, adding nothing to the accumulated glory of the Independent Burlesque Association. However the reputation of the I. B. A. does not particularly suffer as a result of this presentation.

Thus, in a show of only ordinary merit—where the comedians are passingly funny and the specialty artistes are adequate—it is the less known contribution that is the more outstanding. That honor this week goes to Dorothy Wahl for her animated gold statute routine, in particular, and for all her solo numbers in general.

Nora Ford tops the feminine contingent of tantalizers and presents a couple of numbers justifying that position. She is, however, closely beset by the returning Rita Zane. Ann Mitchell is the third teaser, who doubles in the sketches, abetting Dolly Hendricks as the soubrette.

The Dancing Bryanettes have several commendable routines.

John Teter Wins Gun As Ace Vermin Killer

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Parsons, W. Va., April 1.—John C. Teter, of Jenningston, has been declared first-prize winner in the vermin-killing contest sponsored by the Parsons Rod and Gun Club. He had a total of 30,650 points and received a shotgun as a prize. Elmer Nestor, of Clover district, 25,950 points, received a rifle for second prize.

Twenty-two entered in the contest with total kills reported as follows: Five wildcats, 111 foxes, 130 weasels, 37 mink, 32 hunting-house cats, 20 hawks, 40 owls, 25 crows, 103 red squirrels and 590 rats. The club will sponsor a bird and snake-killing contest beginning May 1.

40 Police Cars to Patrol Roads of West Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charleston, W. Va., April 1. Forty State troopers, equipped with new automobiles and motorcycles, tomorrow will begin patrolling the principal highways of the State, under orders of P. D. Shingleton, superintendent.

Fifty State police will be added to the department's highway safety force July 1, after the applicants have attended a training school which will open at Point Pleasant May 1. They, too, will be equipped with new vehicles.

Newport News Elects Jones.

Newport News, Va., April 1 (AP).—Thomas B. Jones, a former mayor, today was elected a member of the city council to serve out the unexpired term of Harry Reyner, resigned. He will serve until August 31, 1938.

Star Profits by Recent Defeat

A new and striking photographic study of the blonde, if not at the moment ebullient, Bette Davis, whose omission from the nominations for the annual acting awards of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences has caused her to be inundated by a flood of evidence of how widely appreciated her work opposite Leslie Howard in "Of Human Bondage" really was. She admits a crushing disappointment, but renewed hope for the future. Many of the former academy votes have gone over to Equity now, anyway!

A New Pastime Is Inaugurated For Youngsters

International League Has New Program Series for Saturday Afternoons.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

"TAMING OF THE JUNGLE." The Women's International League presents the cinematographic description of the capture and training of wild animals, featuring Melvin Koontz and Olga Celeste, at the first of three Saturday children's entertainments, At Pierce Hall. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

The Women's International League, local sponsors of the Children's Theater of New York, inaugurated a new series of children's entertainments in Pierce Hall on Saturday afternoon.

Lucile Q. Mann, author, traveler and explorer in her own right, as well as with her distinguished husband, Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, spoke briefly about her friends of the Zoo.

The feature picture of the afternoon, "Taming of the Jungle," which depicted the life of jungle critters from the time Frank Buck "brings 'em back alive" until Clyde Beatty puts them in the big cage before an audience. The one used Saturday must have been an exceedingly ancient print.

Despite the technical flaws, however, the picture was enjoyable, presenting a connected account of trapping and training the jungle beasts.

Reviewed National Zoo.

Mrs. Mann, in her informal remarks, reviewed briefly the history of the National Zoological Park, from its establishment in 1890 and appointment of its one and only head keeper, William H. Blackburne. The first denizens of the Zoo, she said, were the animals kept at the Smithsonian Institution as live specimens, but when the park was obtained and quarters assured, various contributions were received.

Prior to Mrs. Mann's talk, three other pictures were shown: "In Old Guatemala," a travelogue of the Latin American country; "Bosom Friends," a study of tolerance by naturally antagonistic animals, and "Birds in the Spring," a Silly Symphony.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra presents last concert of the season in Constitution Hall Sunday afternoon; Hans Kindler, conductor. Annual "request" program: Overture to "Die Zauberfloete" (Mozart), Symphony in B minor (Schubert), "Ride of the Valkyries" (Wagner), Second Movement from E minor Symphony (Dvorak, Hungarian Dance in G minor (Brahms), "Finlandia" (Sibelius), "Kuenstlerleben" Walzer (Strauss).

In size and in enthusiasm, yesterday's audience expressed a lively appreciation of the work done by the National Symphony Orchestra during the season, as well as an evident confidence in its future. The ovation tendered to Dr. Hans Kindler when he stepped upon the podium and the warmth of the applause that filled every interval between compositions must have demonstrated to the conductor and his men the friendly esteem in which they are held by their loyal patrons.

Since the program was the choice, by majority vote, of those who heard and applauded it, only familiar music sounded in the crowded auditorium. Some of it was what we call immortal and even those who had requested a different overture doubtless found compensation in the loveliness of "The Magic Flute." Mozart's last opera is held in tenderest affection by devotees of that composer, for they always remember that it was being performed nightly while he struggled with his fatal illness and that he followed its scenes in imagination, watch in hand.

Deathless too, as long as man enjoys melody, is the B minor symphony of Schubert. It is time that we stopped calling this work unfinished, for it is perfect as it stands. Conjecture has busied itself to find reasons why Schubert wrote only two movements, but the obvious explanation is that he had said everything he had to say and that inspiration ceased. The slight sketches for a third movement are witnesses to his inability to add anything more.

Schubert never heard this symphony performed and fate seemed determined for a time that posterity should not hear it either. For 40 years the manuscript gathered dust among the papers of Anselm Huettenbrenner, until it was brought to light by the Viennese conductor, Johann Herbeck, to whom millions of music lovers have since paid an unconscious debt of gratitude.

The remaining items on the program all bear the stamp of popularity and for good reasons. An irresistible excitement emanates from the "Ride of the Valkyries," those beautiful and terrifying daughters of Odin, who hovered over battlefields to pick the heroes who were to be slain and born away to Valhalla. The slow movement from Dvorak's E minor symphony is the finest section of that work, which Americans feel to be peculiarly their own because it was composed in New York and orchestrated in Spillville, Ind.

The G minor Hungarian Dance of Brahms, played with splendid verve, aroused such a prolonged demonstration from the audience that Dr. Kindler was obliged to repeat it. There were stormy moments of applause also after "Finlandia" and the Strauss waltz.

Peery Will See Ickes on Scenic Parkway Plan

Difficulty in Obtaining Land to Be Discussed at Parley Friday.

By the Associated Press.

Gov. Peery, of Virginia, will talk with Secretary Ickes Friday on Virginia's trouble obtaining control over lands adjoining the proposed scenic parkway.

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, arranged the conference with the Interior Department head yesterday after being requested by Ickes to bring in the Governor for conversations on the subject.

Byrd and H. G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, will participate with Peery in the conference.

Virginia is acquiring a 200-foot right of way for the parkway which is to connect Shenandoah and Great Smoky Mountains National Parks, but has encountered difficulty obtaining scenic easements covering 400-foot strips on either side of the right of way.

Byrd said in announcing final arrangements for the conference that he had not talked with Ickes since a chance meeting at the Capitol last week when the conference was requested. At that time, Byrd said, the matter of funds for carrying out the parkway proposal was not discussed.

Ickes' statement to newspapermen some weks ago that $6,000,000 earmarked for the park had been impounded, caused Byrd to demand a Treasury report on the use of the $3,300,000,000 Public Works fund appropriated in 1933 and administered by Ickes.

As a result of that report Byrd proposed—and obtained—adoption of an amendment prohibiting use of the $4,880,000,000 work-relief appropriation for carrying on the ordinary functions of Government. The amendment was kept in the bill by Senate and House conferees seeking to adjust differences between the two lawmaking bodies.

Prince Georges Gamblers Face Probe by Jury

Investigation Ordered by Judge Mattingly as April Jurors Meet.

A grand jury investigation of gambling in Prince Georges County was ordered yesterday by Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, of the local circuit court.

Addressing his charge to the opening session of the jury at the beginning of the April term of the court, Judge Mattingly told the judicail body it "had every reason to indict" if violations of the gambling law were found.

"There has been a great deal of publicity about gambling in this county," he said. "There is the possibility that a great deal of gambling has been going on, from slot machines to organized gambling."

Since the grand jury adjourned last November, the Jimmie La Fontaine gambling establishment on Bladensburg road at the District line has been closed. Numerous raids have also been made on slot machines.

Judge Mattingly was accompanied on the bench by Chief Judge Walter J. Mitchell, of La Plata, who was visiting the court for the first time since his appointment last fall. He was appointed to succeed his cousin, the late Chief Judge W. Mitchell Digges.

In addition to Foreman Henry Bowie Contee Clagett, other persons selected yesterday for the grand jury were Clifford E. Gasch, Lloyd T. Meeds, Theodore Gates, Ignatius Mitchell, James O. R. Carter, Bryan Pumphry, James M. Roberts, Benjamin H. Gaither, A. A. Mothershead, Otto J. Myer, Russell L. Beall, William J. Walters, William S. Hall, William C. Kerby, John G. Barnacle, John Zug, George E. Moore, William R. Burroughs, John A. Russell, Hugh F. O'Connell, Clement Beall and Charles W. Frerie.

$1,000 Annual Levy On Slot Machines Due

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Morgantown, W. Va., April 1.—The city council is preparing an ordinance assessing a flat rate of $1,000 a year tax on each slot machine, more as a correctional than financial measure. It hopes in that way to rid the city of slot machines.

Should the council fail to adopt the ordinance, it is asserted the State tax department will order the slot machines confiscated because of their owners' violations of laws for which licenses were issued.

Va. Youth Accused Of Killing Father

Brookneal, Va., April 1 (AP).—Lynwood Ashworth, 18, will be arraigned Friday before Trial Justice W. H. Overby, of Campbell County, on a technical charge of murder in the slaying of his father, Walter Andrew Ashworth.

The elder Ashworth, a tenant farmer, was said to have threatened his wife and daughters while drinking, and his son killed him with a charge of buckshot.

Homemakers Meet Today.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., April 1.—Eighteen homemakers' clubs of Wicomico County will assemble at Maryland State Teachers College here tomorrow for their annual spring meeting. Mrs. B. Frank Adkins, president of the county group, will open the meeting. Officers will be chosen. More than 300 members are expected.

Hollywood

Hollywood, April 1.

MAX REINHARDT'S next American venture will be a production of "The Merchant of Venice," to be staged at the Hollywood Bowl and the leading role will be played by Edward G. Robinson . . . Marlene Dietrich telephones, long distance, to Felixe Rollo at the Trocadero, and his companion, Peggy Fears, isn't wise to why he leaves the table . . . Randy Scott's new honey is Jane Hamilton, the beautiful show girl recently given a contract by Radio flickers . . . Dick Powell and Warners are battling because they want him to stop broadcasting for that commercial. Powell's latest escort, when he goes out stepping, is Oliva de Haviland, who played with him in "Midsummer Night's Dream" . . . Jerome Kern just completed the score for a new operetta at Metro and played it for the producer. The producer made faces during the demonstration, and said that he didn't like the score, that it sounded bad. Then Harold Eaton, a professional pianist, was summoned to play the score, and after he finished the producer said: "That's good. That's music that sounds like something."

Students Close Pearson Fight, Await Decision

After a week of bitter attacks against Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland, Marshall Mathias, editor of the Diamondback, student publication, yesterday "rested his case." He said he would await a board of regents decision.

The youthful editor, who allegedly leads a student body move to oust the president of the university, summed up "the salient developments" of the controversy in five points. In the weekly edition of the Diamondback, he listed them as follows:

"1. Dr. Pearson's reply to the editorial (which initiated the move with its appearance on the front page of the Diamondback last Monday) in a statement to the press last Monday.

"2. Representative William P. Cole's statement (Mr. Cole is a member of the board of regents) in the Washington newspapers last Tuesday, in which he said he favored an investigation by the board of regents.

"3. Statement last Tuesday by the editorial board of the Diamondback, in which Dr. Pearson's contention that the low faculty morale was due to the budget cut of 1933, was called fallacious.

"4. Receipt of a letter Thursday by the editor of the Diamondback from President Pearson, in which the editor of the student paper was warned against publication of further editorials.

"5. The appointment Thursday by Warren Tydings, president of the Student Government Association, of a secret student committee to act in the controversy.

Meanwhile it was announced that the board of regents meeting, which was expected to be held the middle or last of this week, may be postponed because of injuries suffered by Chairman George M. Shriver.

Mr. Shriver was reported recovering at University Hospital, Baltimore, from several broken ribs received in an automobile accident.

Rains Causing Delay On Spring Planting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., April 1.—With precipitation here in March more than 6 inches and the excess for the first three months of the year about 4 inches, farmers are becoming apprehensive as to preparation for spring crops. Comparatively little plowing has been done and the work is at least six weeks behind time.

With more than an inch of rain during the week-end, it will be another week or ten days before work can be started again, even if there should be no more rain.

House Revives Registrations In Montgomery

Intermediate Filing Out in Measure Adopted; Other Bills Pass.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 1.—The House of Delegates today passed and put before Gov. Nice a measure exempting Montgomery County from the necessity of holding intermediate registrations.

Senator Stedman Prescott (Democrat), Montgomery, sponsored the bill.

Four other Prescott bills were passed today and placed on the Governor's desk. They would:

Require the publication of delinquent taxpayers of Montgomery County in two county newspapers.

Make Montgomery County food vendors take out $100 licenses before permitted to sell merchandise.

Permit swimming pools, recreation centers, amusement park and picnic grounds to be operated in Montogmery County on Sunday.

Nats Nose Out 'Nooga With Rally, 5-4

By Shirley L. Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 1. Unleashing a furious ninth-inning rally comprised of a base on balls, a force out, a wild pitch and a misjudged fly, the Nats won a ball game today at their country place here where they maintain the Chattanooga team as a farm. The score was 5 to 4.

With the score tied at 4-4 at the end of the eighth, Manager Mule Shirley, of the Lookouts, placed the game in the keeping of Dizzy Diggs and the contest immediately went daffy. The Nats finally succeeded in putting themselves out.

Diggs pitched a base on balls to Lyn Lary to begin it all in the ninth and Holbrook forced him at second. The eccentric right-hander wild-pitched Holbrook to second and then Powell lofted a high fly into left field. There was some doubt at first whether the ball would result in a severe case of brain concussion for Left Fielder Waddey or would drop safely for a hit.

Holbrook Goes to Third.

Waddey finally managed in one last lunge to get away from it all and Holbrook went to third with the winning run. He came home when Buddy Myer grounded to Second Baseman Mihalic, who caught the ball, counted the stitches and finally decided to throw it home, although Holbrook, by that time, was well on the way to the bench.

That was not all. Freddy Sington walked and then watched First Baseman Shirley catch Schulte's pop fly for the second out. Always poor in arithmetic, Sington decided it was the third out and broke for his position in left field for the final inning. Then the Chattanoogans unhappily started thinking. Shirley forgot to remember that all he had to do was step on first base to retire Sington and tossed the ball across the diamond to third base, where Powell was staring at Sington in wonder. Thirty-two Chattanooga infielders, at least five, anyway, converged on Powell to take part in the run-down that ended the inning.

Nats Are Outhit, 11-7.

At bat the day was exceedingly restful for the Nats here. Their farm hands did most of the work, outhitting Washington, 11 to 7. The redeeming feature of the Nats' attack was the awaking of Heinie Manush, who, in three trips to the plate, bounced a double and triple off the right field wall and banged a single to the same sector.

Another fellow who distinguished himself today was Lyn Lary, who contributed the fielding acrobatics on a half-dozen plays that loomed as impossible until Lary converted them into putouts. He started two scintillating double plays, handled ten chances, marred only by an error and otherwise implanted himself solidly in the race for the short-stop job.

Lanahan Hurls Well.

Dick Lanahan, the former Washington sandlotter who is seeking a berth with the Lookouts, did his cause no harm when he held the Nats to five scattered hits in five innings. Two of the four runs he yielded were unearned.

Leon Pettit, the former local favorite, had a 4-0 lead going into the fifth and a 4-3 lead coming out of it as a result of a pair of passes and vicious singles by Miles and Marion. The Lookouts finally tied the score in the eighth when Waddey, Shirley and Lewis banged out straight hits.

Came the ninth and went the ball game.

New Decision Is Given Belmont Over Risko

Cleveland, April 1 (AP).—The Cleveland Boxing Commission reversed itself today and awarded a decision to Jimmy Belmont in the Belmont-Babe Risko match, staged here a week ago.

The commission announced the match as a "no decision" encounter shortly after it was held. The commission decided today it had erred in overruling the men appointed to give the decision. The commission's officials had awarded the contest to Belmont.

Jewish Ring Pilots Ire German Paper

Jacobs' Salute Is Cited; Baer Bout Opposed.

By the Associated Press.

Munich, April 1.—Much irked because Joe Jacobs "Heiled Hitler" with a smoking cigar between the fingers of his saluting hand after the Max Schmeling-Steve Hamas fight at Hamburg, the Bavarian press calls on Schmeling to give Jacobs the sack in the "interests of Germanhood."

The Graenkische Tageszeitung points out that both Schmeling and Walter Neusel still have Jewish manager in defiance of the "Aryan clause," and flays the rest of the German press for its "benevolent silence regarding these shameful conditions in the German sport world."

The paper declares a bout between "German Schmeling and the Jewish headliner of the Jewish world boxing racket, Max Baer, would be intolerable to Germany."

Baer's Plans On Offers Undecided

Manager Denies Champ to Meet Winner of Carnera-Louis Go.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 1.—World Heavyweight Champion Max Baer started getting himself into condition for a proposed exhibition tour today while his manager, Ancil Hoffman, heard offers of more serious warfare without making any decisions.

Hoffman listened to the Chicago Stadium promoters, Nate Lewis and Jim Mullen, who want the champion to engage in a ten-round non-title bout April 12, if a suitable opponent can be located, or a four-round exhibition with Joe Louis, sensational Detroit Negro, on April 15. Hoffman didn't say yes and he didn't say no.

Neither did he say yes or no to Joe Jacobs, manager of former Champion Max Schmeling, on the proposition of a championship battle in Chicago next June.

Denies Promoter's Report.

Hoffman said that a report from New York that Mike Jacobs had announced he had arranged terms for a bout next September between the champion and the winner of the Joe Louis-Primo Carnera tussle, was not "exactly true."

"I talked to Jacobs," Hoffman said, "but we are in no position to accept terms for a fight that far off, until Madison Square Garden has either named or failed to name a suitable opponent for a championship bout by April 15. The same goes for Joe Jacobs' request for a Baer-Schmeling bout."

The champion's manager said that plans for the exhibition tour, through the Middle West, are in the making, but that no dates have been definitely arranged, or any opponents selected. He said that Baer probably will appear in exhibitions at Cleveland and Dayton, Ohio.

His only comment on a story from a Munich, Germany, newspaper, which declared a bout between Schmeling and Baer, would be "intolerable to Germany," was "it makes good reading." Joe Jacobs, flayed in the same story for "heiling Hitler with a smoking cigar in his saluting hand," could not be reached for comment.

Jockey Is Banned For Using Battery

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., April 1.—The following rulings came from the Florida Racing Commission after a meeting of that body that was held on Monday:

"In the case of Jockey Alvin Snider, charged with using an electric battery on the horse, Chartres, in the fifth race on March 28, Jockey Snider was ruled off all tracks in Florida until further order of the commission."

"In the case of morphine having been found in the saliva test of the horse, Below Cost, taken after the running of the first race on March 22, Trainer Frank McManus and Charles L. Beachey, stable foreman, were ruled off of all tracks in Florida until further order of the commission."

George Fox, who was banished last season for practices detrimental to racing was restored to good standing by the commission.

Furr Batters Silas, Wins In Seventh

District Fighter Awarded Technical K. O. in Thrilling Battle.

Lowry's Jaw Is Broken; Roddy Davis Stopped in First Round.

By Bill McCormick.

PHIL FURR, District welterweight champion, scored a seventh-round technical knockout over Sid Silas, of New York, in a thriller scheduled for ten rounds at the Auditorium last night, but only after Sidney had nearly scored a first-class April Fool joke by almost battering him from under his sectional championship in the opening rounds.

Not that Silas was in front when the finish came, but he had shaken Furr to the heels often enough during the preceding six rounds to keep the 1,700 customers wondering which way the tide of battle would turn next and despite knockdowns in the first, second and fifth rounds, he was not near being stopped himself until the dramatic finish.

The beginning of the end started with a short right to the jaw which sent Sid down for no count. As he popped up, he ran into a sizzling right uppercut, delivered with every ounce of Furr's punching power. Over he dropped—on his face, apparently out like a fight promoter dodging ducat seekers on the eve of a championship fight.

Sid Again Staggered.

Somehow, Sid managed to untangle himself from the canvas at nine, only to run into another terrific right, which probably would have dropped him had not the ropes been behind to hold him up. Furr was stalking him relentlessly, shooting both hands to the head when Referee Muggsy Morris rightfully halted the action, awarding the bout to Furr after 1 minute and 10 seconds of the seventh round.

Sid was down for eight in the first round from a right to the jaw and kissed the canvas for another eight count in the second from a left hook to the jaw. In the fifth, Sid again dropped—this time for two from a short right to the noggin. With the exception of the time he was on the canvas, however, Sid was almost holding his own with Phil.

In the fifth, Silas did nobly until the brief knockdown. He landed a nice right to the head and left to the body answering the bell. Furr took the lead and received a hard left to the jaw, which might have floored him had he not jumped into the ropes as he staggered back. During a bit of heated fisticuffing, Silas slipped to the floor, but bounced up again. Sid then shook Furr to the heels with a staggering left, only to receive the short right which sent him down for two.

With the exception of the fourth and fifth rounds, every round went to Furr, but Silas always was a constant threat until the finish. Sid weighed 148½; Furr, 145½.

Jacobs Stops Davis.

Stumpy Jacobs, a Norfolk welterweight who knocked out Roddy Davis in two rounds in a recent bout, repeated the performance in even quicker time in a semifinal scheduled for eight rounds. Jacobs floored Davis with a sizzling right to the jaw about midway of the first round. Roddy wobbled about on the floor for an eight count, then arose weaving uncertainly, his hands at his sides and in no condition to defend himself. Referee Muggsy Morris did the only humane thing—he stepped between the fighters, halting the action after 1 minute and 45 seconds.

Reds Journee scored a fourth-round technical knockout over Bob Lowry, a Washington welterweight, in a preliminary scheduled for eight rounds. The Norfolk knockerout broke Lowry's jaw with a lusty right-hand wallop in the fourth round, which made it impossible for the defeated warrior to answer the bell for the fifth.

Henry Irving, a local light-heavyweight, took a unanimous decision from Billy Grimm, another local product in a four-round emergency bout which was arranged to recompense the customers for the briefness of the other preliminary contests.

A Finish at Bowie Such as Turf Fans May See Today

Gomez Defeats Daffy Dean In 2-1 Duel

2,000 See Yankees Win Mid-Season Battle of Mound Experts.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., April 1. Paul (Daffy) Dean and Vernon (Lefty) Gomez staged a mid-season pitching duel today and the honors went to Gomez as the New York Yankees nosed out the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals, 2 to 1, in an exhibition game at Waterfront Park before 2,000 enthusiastic fans.

Twirling in mid-season style, Dean and Gomez hooked up for six innings, each allowing three hits.

Pepper Martin opened the hostilities with a home run in the first inning but in the same frame Ben Chapman rapped out a single, scoring Combs and Rolfe who got on the base paths via a base on balls and an error by Martin.

Jones, Far Off Form, To Fail, Friends Feel

By Alan Gould
Associated Press Sports Writer.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 1.—Despite the widespread interest generated by the second annual comeback of Robert Tyre Jones, jr., it became increasingly evident from first-hand observation today that only a sudden, miraculous return to form will make it possible for the eminent Georgian and former world champion figure in the "money list" when the boys start firing in the Augusta National Golf Club's invitation tournament.

Five years after his celebrated "grand slam" and subsequent retirement, Bob Jones needs no alibis for anything that happens on the links, but he's about ready to admit the truth of Big Bill Tilden's claim that there's "no substitute for competition."

Enthusiasm and sentiment have combined to establish Jones as a co-favorite in this year's tourney with Paul Runyan, the national P. G. A. champion, and Gene Sarazen, making his first appearance in the event.

Disgusted With Shots.

Jones played so poorly for nine holes today, playing with Lawson Little, Bill Mehlhorn and Tommy Armour, that he went off by himself for the kind of a workout he needed, unhampered by a gallery. He shot the outgoing nine in an even 40 and was disgusted with most of his shots. He was away off on his short approaches and putting badly.

"I've been hitting the ball fairly well at times but I simply need a lot of hard work," said Bob. "Naturally I hope to do better this year than I did last spring. I do think I'm putting better—with a replica of my old 'Calamity Jane' except that it's quite a bit heavier—but it's difficult to recapture the old confidence. If I had any thought of making a try for the National Open again I would join the winter circuit around the first of the year and play myself into condition, but it's impossible for me to do that now."

Odds Against Him.

If Bob's practice rounds can be discounted on the theory he is getting a lot of bad shots out of his system while it doesn't mean anything, he should be going great by the time the 72-hole trek begins Thursday. Golf doesn't work that way, however, and it's an even bet that Jones has trouble finishing among the first eight or ten. He concedes that himself, and most of the pros, although they would welcome his return to form, agree that the odds are against it.

Jones shares the views of most observers that this year's field is stronger, with an all-America golfing cast on hand, and that the pace will be considerably faster. The course is not quite so tough to score on, with some of the approaching hazards removed and the greens more consistent. It may take 280 or better to grab first money, whereas Horton Smith topped the field with 284 last spring.

Sarazen, who shot a 67 today, five under par, after previously equaling the practice record of 65 set by Jones, says it's one of the greatest but not the hardest layouts in America.

Takes Real Skill.

"It doesn't rank with Oakmont or Pine Valley as a tough course, but it takes real judgment and skill in playing approach shots," said Gene. "It's the nearest thing in this country to the British idea of a golf links, and I feel right at home."

Sarazen's 67 was equaled by Johnny Farrell, the former National Open Champion, who celebrated his

Night Baseball Turns Eyes On Reds

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Cincinnati Reds, although picked by most experts to repeat for the National League cellar, will command unprecedented attention this season because of their proposed experiments in night baseball.

If these first major league tests of nocturnal pellet pounding at Crosley Field prove successful at the gate, tremendous changes in the national pastime doubtless will follow. If the floodlights can steer the Reds out of the financial red, big-time baseball—like big-time prizefighting—may become a night sport ultimately.

As the campaign nears, baseball's brass hats are beginning to realize more fully just how important these Cincinnati experiments will be. President Ford Frick, of the National League, admitted today that "if the trials at Crosley Field prove successful this season, I would not be surprised to see night baseball sweep the circuit shortly. When the night game was first proposed in our circuit, I was strongly opposed to it, but the more I study it, the more I realize its possibilities."

Limited Schedule Approved.

Other officials predict that if the red-legged guinea pigs thrive in the moonlight, the American League will swing over to the night game in 1936. As yet, only the national circuit is trying the floodlights. Frick's outfit approved a limited number of night games at the December meeting.

Each National League Club is limited to seven night home games, with Saturdays, Sundays and holidays barred. A survey of the National cities today indicated that Cincinnati was the only club certain to stage seven allotted moonlight affairs. Sam Berardon, of the St. Louis Cardinals, is trying to arrange with the Browns, owners of Sportsman's Park, to permit installation of proper lighting equipment.

A few of the National clubs were opposed to adoption of the night game, but President Frick said today that all clubs, except the New York Giants, have agreed to play one night game at Crosley Field.

Powell Crosley, jr., president of the Reds, and General Manager Larry MacPhail, are so certain that night baseball will help the club that they are preparing to install

Picard's Rally Wins Atlanta Golf Test

Cooper Falters to Finish Two Shots Back of Winner's 209.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, April 1.—Continuing the spectacular play that carried him to the heights among golf's money winners in the winter campaigns, Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., today added the Metropolitan Open championship to his collection and enriched his bank account by $400.

Trailing his nearest competitor, Lighthorse Harry Cooper, veteran Chicago marksman, by two strokes as the field set out for the final 18 holes, Picard clipped six strokes from par 71, adding a beautiful 65 to his 144 total through yesterday's play to card a 209 and nose out the aged campaigner who came in second with 211.

Picard, winner recently of the Charleston Open and heading the list of money winners with $5,000, played outstanding golf throughout his final round, and was all square with Cooper as the pair drove from the last tee. Both landed on the green, with Picard farthest away. The Pennsylvania sharpshooter smacked his putt into the cup from 40 feet for a birdie 2 while Cooper three-putted.

Comes Home in 31.

Both Picard and Cooper had 34s at the turn, two under par, while the former came in with a scintillating 31, four under perfect figures, on the last nine, with Cooper taking 35 for a total of 69. The latter received $300.

In third place came Byron Nelson, who carded a 69, two under par, on his last round for a total of 215 and prize money of $250. He was trailed by Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., and Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee, each of whom registered 69 for a total of 216.

Three Golf Events Are Delayed by Rain

Rain yesterday forced postponement until Thursday of the opening round second team matches of the District Women's Golf Association scheduled at Columbia Country Club.

The first team matches scheduled today at Indian Spring Coutry Club also have been postponed.

The informal sweepstakes for Middle Atlantic pros also was called off at Indian Spring.

Track Heavy For Initial Program

Officials Predict Crowd of 15,000; Conditions Favor Star Porter.

By Walter Haight.

THE combination of Bowie and mud is as well-known around the turf circuit as the cry of "ham an" at the Greek lunchroom. Although track officials will hardly agree, it is only fitting that the track should be thick and heavy as a field of maiden 2-year-olds parade to the post this afternoon to start another Maryland racing season. To say that Bowie is ready is putting it mildly. In fact, Bowie is anxious and rarin' to go in every sense of the word and so are some 15,000 regular and occasional turf fans.

Whatever the conditions, barring a foot of snow, the Bowie program will be carried on, starting at 2:30 o'clock. Once more the pine trees along the back stretch will sway to the bedlam from the stands, long lines will form at the ticket windows and the shrieks of the lucky will mingle with the alibis of the second thinkers.

Double New Feature.

In actual horse racing Bowie offers nothing new. The never-dying thrill of close horse contests will be present as usual. There will be the same old slash of the whip, the splatter of the hoofs and the drive on down to the wire.

However, there is a new feature in the betting ring. Maryland finally has succumbed to the demand for the "daily double." This form of wagering, popular at other courses for some time, will be making its debut in Maryland and will be indulged in by most Bowie fans for the first time.

The high spot of the day's racing is the Inaugural Handicap at five and one-half furlongs. A field of 15 horses, ranging from three years up, were named overnight for the $2,000 added contest. Despite the change in track conditions, the majority are expected to accept the issue. Due to the off-going, it is likely that Star Porter, the property of Ral Parr, the Maryland sportsman, will be made the favorite.

Others Like Mud.

However, Silent Shot, Evergold, Bright Haven, Wise Prince and Black Buddy have all shown a liking for heavy tracks at some stage of their racing careers and will not lack for backing.

The six other races are of claiming caliber, with the fourth race, a Grade B Handicap affair, standing out. Maiden juveniles, as usual, will open the program, while the other four races are for 3-year-olds and upward at distances ranging from 6 furlongs to a mile and a sixteenth.

Although the caliber of horses for the opening day is only fair as Maryland cards go, there is every indication that better fields may be expected as the 11-day meeting progresses.

More Are En Route.

Many of the better horses are either still on their way from Florida and Texas or arrived too recently for racing purposes. Practically the same situation exists in regard to jockeys. The riding colony will pick up later but only a few of the outstanding boys will be on hand for today's program.

The daily double will be on the first and third races and the ticket windows on this form of betting will be closed five minutes before post time.

Today is a legal holiday in Mary-

How Daily Double Bets Operate

The Daily Double, the new betting feature to be used for the first time at Bowie today, is not a parlay or a sweepstakes. It is a combination bet on the first and third races.

The player tries to pick the winners of these races. When he has arrived at his choices, he notes the post position number printed at the left of the horse's name on the program. Thus if he wants Man o' War, No. 5 in the first race, and Zev, No. 7 in the third race, he goes to the Daily Double window and asks for "5 and 7." The transaction is based entirely on first place. Second and third does not figure except in rare cases where no tickets are sold on one or both of the winning horses.

The "double" is not affected by the mutuel prices of either of the individual winners. It is a separate pool in which those holding the winning combination divide all money played, minus the track and State deductions.

Daily Double ticket windows will close five minutes before post time of the first race and tickets may be purchased only in $2 denominations, although there is no limit to the number of tickets purchased.

Photographers' Feud Blamed For Defeat of Golden Miller

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 1.—A feud between British and American newsreel photographers was blamed tonight by competent spokesmen for the failure of Golden Miller, red-hot favorite, to finish in the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree Friday.

It was said a flash of light and a billowing cloud of smoke from a photographer's old-fashioned flash gun startled Golden Miller just as he was getting ready to make a jump, causing the horse to "refuse" and spill Jockey Gerry Wilson, thus saving British bookmakers some $10,000,000.

Certain British newsreel interests, it was stated, had purchased exclusive official photographing rights on the inside course, paying £1,500; but enterprising American rivals rushed up high platform towers at the last minute and stationed themselves at strategic points on the outside course.

When British cameramen discovered this "Yankee trick," it was claimed they attempted to storm one of the towers, rocking it violently and attempting to pull it down while American photographers were grinding away on it.

British police drove off the assailants, whereupon the British movie men were said to have resolved upon some strategy of their own. This was revealed when a flare bulb suddenly burst at a crucial moment, just as Golden Miller and the rest of the field approached the American cameras, cutting off their view and incidentally, it was

Mantagna, $4.80 Choice, Wins Tropical's Closing Day Feature

Sun Fairplay Is Second In Test

15,000 Watch Program, Meade Is Fined for Striking Wright.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., April 1 (AP).—Florida's most successful racing season closed today with a bold flourish as Montagna, striking bay gelding, romped home the victor by three lengths in Tropical Park's Derby consolation stakes, $5,000 added.

More than 2,000,000 persons paid admission to Florida's two horse and ten grayhound tracks since the 1934-35 season opened December 1, and wagering exceeded $36,000,000 in the legal pari mutuels.

The State of Florida's revenue, gained by taxes, on admissions and wagering and occupational licenses, amounted to $1,425,000. Gains from 25 to 32 per cent were registered in attendance, betting and revenue over last year's record highs.

Raises Derby Hopes.

The victory added materially to Mantagna's Kentucky Derby hopes. The Fairfields Stable's Sun Fairplay, with Wayne D. Wright in the saddle, chased Mantagna home. Bloodroot, with Don Meade up, was third by a neck to show Col. E. R. Bradley's proverbial derby-winning luck does not always hold.

Mantagna, ridden well by Litzenberger, repaid $4.80 in the $2 mutuels for win tickets; $3.40 to place and $2.50 to show. Sun Fairplay paid $6.20 and $3.60 and Bloodroot $3.70 for show position.

The winner, second to Black Helen in the $15,000 Florida Derby at Hialeah Park, was unruly at the barrier and had to be shifted to outside. Stalling off the bid of Brannon, Mrs. Charles S. Bromley's Kentucky Derby nominee, Mantagna was free and clear in the home stretch and willing at the finish.

More than 15,000 devotees watched the derby consolation stakes, sixth race of an eight-race charity day card that wound up Tropical's split season.

Don Meade, who rode Bloodroot, was fined $100 by the stewards for striking Wayne Wright, on Sun Fairplay, with his whip in the hotly fought stretch drive.

Wright rode two winners to bring his total for the meeting to 31. It was the fifth meeting at which he had led the jockeys.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KNIGHTS HOPE, $3.90, $2.50, $2.40; BABY CHARD, $3.80, $3.30; PAR VALUE, $14.80.

KNIGHTS HOPE, away in first flight, went into command after opening furlong, drew into a winning lead and held sway until end. BABY CHARD went forwardly placed from the beginning, but was unable to threaten the winner after displacing PULL UP. PAR VALUE, kept under stout urging while holding a forward position, held on gamely in the final issue. DELANO closed strong from poor beginning. SQUEEZE OUT was away very slowly. She closed a big rush. GRAND CHAMPION could not trouble the leaders. FULL UP weakened steadily after a half-mile. CASH SURRENDER was held safe. JUST BUCK was outrun.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs. Coral Gables Special. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:00½. Off at 3:03. Winner, F. M. Alger, jr.'s b. f. (2), by Neddie—Sun Vive. Trained by G. S. Preece. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEDVIVE, $3.30, $2.20, $2.20; MAERIEL, $5.50, $2.90; GLORY GREENOCK, $2.90.

NEDVIVE, particularly alert when the start came, took command at once, met determined opposition from GLORY GREENOCK, then drew out when shaken up during the final drive. MAERIEL, forced to work his way up on the outside to engage the leaders, closed with a rush after reaching the home stretch. GLORY GREENOCK dropped back when swinging into the home stretch and barely lasted to outstay SKOTCHY. The latter went strongly for three furlongs, then stopped suddenly in the run-in sixteenth. BUSHMASTER was unable to enter into forward contention. NEDS AFFINITY was squeezed back when the start came and could not menace thereafter. ABOVEBOARD was outrun.

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $700. Claiming price, $1,050. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:38. Off at 3:43½. Winner, Mrs. A. Carfano's ch. c. (4), by Chatterton—Aurora. Trained by L. Williams. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:52 3-5.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIEF A., $8.50, $4.30, $3.50; SUN TEATIME, $3.30, $2.90; STANDOUT, $4.70.

CHIEF A. outran his field to the first turn, was rated in front until challenged, then responded strongly and outstayed SUN TEATIME. Latter went in closest pursuit of the winner from the beginning, challenged gamely when approaching the home stretch, and was wearing the winner down at every stride nearing the finish. STANDOUT bettered his position gradually in the last half-mile, but could not threaten the first two. GUIDING LIGHT was gaining slowly in the late stages. EASTERN RULER was under strong pressure in the last half-mile. ST. CHRISTOPHER went forwardly but was unable to engage the leaders. The others were never factors.

FOURTH RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:18½. Off at 4:25½. Winner, F. M. Alger, jr.'s b. f. (3), by Herodot or Trumer—Sun Vive. Trained by G. S. Preece. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:07.

SWEETBROOM	111	9	3	10	10	10	10	Hanford	37.30

†O. S. Preece and F. M. Alger, jr., entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK VIVE, $6.70, $3.00, $2.40; MAPLE QUEEN, $10.30, $4.70; BE MINE, $2.80.

DARK VIVE, rated close up in the early running, wore the leaders down when reaching the home stretch and was kept under pressure thereafter. MAPLE QUEEN went close to WANOAH in the early running, responded nicely when shaken up, but could not threaten the winner when nearing the finish. BE MINE saved ground in the early rading, was vigorously ridden in the last three furlongs, and closed gamely. TRUE CHARM was forced to race on the outside of the leaders throughout and showed a good effort. HYMARQUE finished with good courage. MISS WEBB was squeezed back at the break and then was steered wide to better her position. She took all chance when making a wide turn into the home stretch. WANOAH stopped badly after having good early speed. DAN SKILLING was taken to the outside for the start. SUN REVERIE raced poorly.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. Graded Handicap. Class "B." For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:58½. Off at 5:00½. Winner, J. McAuliffe's br. g. (4), by Coventry—Salico. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12 3-5.

MINTANA	107	5	7	2½	3h	6½	8	8	Rosen	12.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THUNDERTONE, $9.40, $5.00, $3.30; IDLE ALONG, $5.40, $3.20; SALUT D'AMOUR, $4.00.

THUNDERTONE displaced the early leaders when midway of the back stretch, opened up a long lead, and held sway thereafter. IDLE ALONG went prominently from the beginning, responded willingly for the final drive, and outfinished SALUT D'AMOUR. Latter was under pressure after the turn, responded and weakened gradually during the final stages. FLAG WAVE improved her position slowly and could not menace. FLOWERY LADY could never enter contention. SHUFFLE ON was unable to reach contention at any stage. MINTANA stopped badly after six furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700. Claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:47. Off at 6:48. Winner, C. Hunt's br. c. (3), by Prince of Bourbon—Bachelor's Choice. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47 2-5.

UNKNOWN SOLDIER	106	6	3	8½	10	10	10	10	Rosen	6.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RARE BEN, $21.60, $10.40, $8.20; BROKEN UP, $6.10, $4.20; RIVER ROSE, $17.90.

RARE BEN, in the thick of contention from the start, took a slight lead midway of the back stretch, came again after being displaced at the stretch turn, and in a hard drive was up finish at the end. BROKEN UP worked his way on the inside, found racing room, then came to the outside to finishe with a belated rush. RIVER ROSE was rushed along from the beginning and she faltered when reaching the home stretch. LA CHERIE came with a belated rush in the last half-mile. TARTAN BETSY showed a good effort. PIPING HOT was forced to race wide and weakened. TRANSPORT was unable to threaten. UNKNOWN SOLDIER was never a factor.

Baltimoreans Face A. A. U. Champions

Sholl's and Black Hawks Hosts Tomorrow in Series Openers.

SHOLL'S and Twin Oaks Black Hawks, unlimited and 145-pound District A. A. U. champions, respectively, will face Stonewall Democratic Club and the Ramblers, Baltimore A. A. U. titleholders, in the first of the inter-city series championship games tomorrow night at Tech High School's gym.

Basketball Chairman Winfree Johnson completed arrangements for the series with George Bacon, of the Baltimore A. A. U. yesterday. It also was agreed that each of the series games would take place in Washington, with the second contest probably to be held Saturday night.

Also on the program tomorrow night will be the final for the District A. A. U. girls championship between Sherwood, conqueror of Al's A. C. defending titleholders, and the Leland A. C. The girls' game will start at 7:30. Twin Oaks and Ramblers will meet at 8:30, and Sholl's and Stonewall Democratic Club will clash at 9:30.

The A. A. U. granted the Sholl's team permission to use Hal Kiesel, center, and Bill Noonan, forwards, both George Washington University stars, who were ineligible to play in The Post's tournament. Both will get regular starting assignments against Stonewall, with Noonan to team with Bernie Jones at forward, and Sammy Hook and Ollie Tipton, all tournament guard choices, taking care of the guard berths. Kiesel and Noonan will add considerable offensive strength to the already powerful Sholl's team.

Maurice Enright and Davey Keppell will referee the games.

Favorite's Defeat Blamed on Feud said, prompting Golden Miller's $10,000,000 balk.

Miss Dorothy Paget, owner of Golden Miller, issued a public statement confirming reports she had broken with her trainer, Basil Briscoe.

"It is a terrible thing for the owner when the trainer and jockey disagree," the statement said, "but unfortunately for Miss Paget the trainer has taken the entire matter entirely in his own hands."

Only 1 Washingtonian Survives With 4 Other Easterners.

EASTERNERS in general and Washingtonians in particular were of a distinct minority among the survivors of the first day's play in the 1935 National A. A. U. hand ball championships opening yesterday on the Central Y. M. C. A. courts. Only Jack Schwartz of the Jewish Community Center, little but fast former District champion, remained to represent the Capital in the second round as powerful invading forces, led by Sam Atcheson, of Memphis, the defending champion, swept through their initial tests.

Westerners dominated the ranks of the 16 survivors, only five of whom come from the East and one, Atcheson, fro mthe South. Two of the Easterners, however, Angelo Nelson, of the Baltimore Y. M. C. A., Trullio, of Boorklyn, and George the former a one-time champion and Nelson, a former National Y. M. C. A. champion, stood out as the men looking most impressively as the obstacles between Aecheson and a third straight title.

Schwartz Beats Srenco.

Schwartz came through in dazzling fashion to turn back Harold Srenco, of St. Louis, 21—5, 21—11. His game was at its peak and followers of the Community Center ace were predicting that he was playing well enough to reach the semifinals. Joe Cowley, Federal Trade Commission official and District champion, stumbled badly in his second game to fall before Bill McCarthy, of Chicago, 21—4, 21—18, after leading, 15 to 7, in the second game. McCarthy rallied brilliantly and ran out the game despite a desperate rally for a few points in the closing minutes by the Washington champion.

Atcheson outclassed Bob Kendler, of the Indianapolis A. C., to win, 21—2, 21—7, and veteran followers of the game were of the opinion that it will be a mild miracle if he is not crowned champion again. He will play Schwartz today.

Nelson Routs Guinee.

Nelson, veteran 39-year-old Baltimorean, finalist in the 1927 championships and former Y. M. C. A. national titlist, displayed class which belied his age, trimming J. R. Guinee, of the local "Y," 21—3, 21—7.

Wallace Winkler, of the local association, offered Trulic, last year's finalist with Atcheson, and champion in 1932, a shade stiffer opposition before losing, 21—8, 21—8.

In one of the tightest matches of the day, J. B. Payne, of the local association, comptroller under the AAA, carried Karl Walter, of the Cleveland Y. M. C. A., to three games before losing, 3-21, 21-4, 21-13. Payne was trailing by but one point at 14-13 in the third game, but the Ohioan took advantage of a sudden lapse on the part of the Agriculture official and ran the game out surprisingly easily in contrast to the hard fight up to that time.

Mangan vs. Baten.

Of the other Washington players entered, Tom Mangan, the veteran tennis star, well over 40 years of age, nearly won his first national handball game when he carried N. W. Maher, of Cleveland, 21-12 and 21-12 coming within an ace of taking the second chapter.

Play in the doubles starts today, with Leo Manka and Henry Herz, of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., defending champions, meeting G. DiRe and Bob Kendler, of Indianapolis, in one of the features at 9 p. m.

Results.

First Round.

William Maurer (St. Paul Y. M. C. A.), defeated William Ogden (Washington Y. M. C. A.), 21-15, 21-4; Joseph Platak (Chicago Community Recreation Center), defeated Ed Linz (New York A. C.), 21-9, 21-13; Richard Bruck (New York City Y. M. C.), defeated Ed Demkin (Cleveland Y. M. C. A.), 21-11, 21-18; E. W. Benson (Salt Lake City Desert Gymnasium) defeated Joseph Gumbis (Chicago Community Center), 21-17, 21-11; Al Hoodiman (Baltimore Y. M. C. A.), defeated L. Rothenberg (Detroit Health Club), 21-8, 21-13; George Nelson (Baltimore Y. M. H. A.), defeated S. R. Guiness (Washington Y. M. C. A.), 21-3, 21-7; N. W. Maher (Cleveland Y. M. C. A.), defeated Tom. Mangan (Washington Y. M. C. A.), 21-12, 21-19; Jack Srenco (St. Louis Y. M. C. A.), defeated Louis Zerba (Detroit Y. M. C. A.), 21-4, 21-17.

Vermont Blanked By Virginia, 4 to 0

Rogers Allows Two Hits in Six Frames, Fans Nine.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 1.—Vermont's nine, opening its Southern trip, was blanked by Virginia here today, 4 to 0. Capt. Orlin Rogers, Cavalier southpaw, twirled for six innings, yielding but two hits and fanning nine. Abbitt, who finished the game, was equally effective, allowing no hits.

Virginia bunched its hits in the fifth frame to register three runs, and added another in the sixth, when Rogers opened with a double and scored on Carter's single to right.

Fielding honors went to the Green Mountain lads. In the fourth frame Ramon raced across the cinder path in left field to snag Rogers' fly. Kenworthy made a spectacular catch of Cowgill's foul in the next frame, and Warner and Degree pulled down long fouls late in the battle.

Biff's Transfer Hinging on 3 Conditions

Will Be Shifted if He and Oklahoma Desire and L. S. U. Consents.

By the Associated Press.

GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR, chief of staff, told Representative Lee (Democrat), Oklahoma, yesterday the War Department would order the transfer of Head Coach Biff Jones from Louisiana State University to the University of Oklahoma if three conditions were satisfied.

"If Jones wants it and Oklahoma wants it, and President Smith, of L. S. U. will agree, the transfer will be made," the general said.

"My only purpose in this matter is to carry out the wishes of the university regent," Lee said. "In consulting with Gen. MacArthur, I acted on the request of Lloyd Noble, a member of the board, who said Dr. W. B. Bizzell, president of the university, wanted the transfer. I knew nothing of any controversy and did not wish to be drawn into it."

Norman, Okla., April 1 (AP).—Student leaders of the University of Oklahoma today prepared "we want you Biff" messages to be sent directly to Capt. Lawrence M. Jones, of Louisiana State University, whom they seek for the Sooner football coaching job.

The messages, to be sent also to the War Department in Washington, were designed to counteract "protests" against Jones sent to Washington by other students.

Cards Picked to Retain Crown, Giants Second, in Scribes' Poll

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 1.—In the opinion of the men who write about baseball, the National League pennant race will be a two-team affair, with the St. Louis Cardinals repeating their 1934 triumph over the New York Giants.

Giving little consideration to the six other clubs, the 77 sports editors and baseball writers, who participated in the ninth annual Associated Press pennant poll, cast all but seven of their first place ballots for either the Cards or the Giants.

Thirty-nine of the experts favored the Cardinals while 31 voted for the Giants.

Only two other teams were given a chance to finish at the top of the standings. They were Chicago and Pittsburgh, with the Cubs receiving four first-place votes and the Pirates three.

The balloting was in sharp contrast to last year when the Cardinals received only 13 first-place ballots and were generally picked to finish no better than fourth. The Giants topped last year's poll.

As further evidence of what the writers think of the coming pennant race, they cast the majority of their second place ballots for either St. Louis or New York. Again the Cards had a slight margin, 33-31.

The Cubs, selected last year as the Giants' foremost rival, could muster only ten votes for the one-two positions but had no trouble in beating out the Pirates for third place, rolling up 38 votes as compared to 21 for the Corsairs.

Despite the addition of Babe Ruth, the Boston Braves, in the opinion of the experts, will finish no better than fifth. They just managed to beat out the Brooklyn Dodgers, 31 to 30, in the battle of ballots. Three writers believed the Tribe would climb as high as third place while six placed them fourth.

C. U. Hits New High in Track Optimism

By Lewis F. Atchison.

FOR sheer optimism you can hand the palm to Dorsey Griffith, the stogie-smoking gent who teaches aspiring young Catholic University athletes their track etiquette. Dorsey's record for optimism surpasses all others by the proverbial mile, but yesterday he reached out for new laurels when he predicted a successful season for his team.

At the moment Griffith's team consists of a half dozen football players, three boxers, a couple of basket ball players, one weight-lifter, a ping-pong expert, a member of the debating society, and an honor student. From this conglomeration of campus life the effervescent Mr. Griffith expects to place a formidable team in competition.

Norton Leading Hurdler.

But Griffith does have some boys who have won their spurs as a nucleus for the squad, including Capt. Mike Norton, who will confine his efforts to the 120-yard high hurdles this season. Johnny Wiglesworth will try hurdling also. Wigglesworth is a wiggler of the old school, and is said to be quite a hand in the timber-topping.

Fred Mix, who will be remembered as Catholic University's 145-pound boxer, has, so Griffith claims, unlimited possibilities as a miler. Mix is a newcomer to track but he has fine staying power, as his ring work evidenced, and looms as the Cardinals' regular at this distance.

For pole vaulting, one of the more strenuous phases of the sport, Griffith has two lads in Goffredi and Sample, who can top 11 feet, and they've been doing that without coaching. "Slim" Mattingly, another novice, has made 5 feet 7 inches in high jumping, while Clem Slaughter and Howard Walker have been leaping around 22 feet in the broad jump. Griffith thinks all can be coached and polished up and made consistent winners.

Trio to Toss Weights.

Ed Karpowich, Bill Lajousky and Ed Clements, a trio of educated young bruisers, have applied for the weight-throwing berth and with all of 'em heaving the shot better than 40 feet Griffith is satisfied that there will be plenty of protection in this class. For practice the boys have been throwing the bull, but they seem to have something on the iron ball.

Others whom Griffith is counting on are Bernie Lieb, quarter-miler; Bill Flynn, 220; Irish Carroll, 100; Pete Dranginis and Frank Weedon, 880; Joe Hugal, Bob Slaughter and Henry Somers, 440. He has others who may be heard from as the season progresses, hopeful youngsters who may attain stardom under Griffith.

steel lighting towers and other equipment costing about $40,000.

Success in Minors.

Because of the night game's success in the minor leagues, they figure they are not taking much of a gamble. Night baseball was played by every club in the International, Pacific Coast, Western and Middle Atlantic Leagues in 1934. Six clubs in the American Association will have lighting systems this year and Beaumont is the only outfit in the Texas League without lights. Some of the Southern Association and New York-Pennsylvania Clubs are playing night baseball. Likewise some in the Piedmont League and Western Association.

The first International League night game was played at Buffalo, July 3, 1930, and since then floodlights swept the league. "I figure it increased attendance about 400 per cent throughout the circuit," William Manley, league secretary, said today.

The first night game on record in America was at Fort Wayne back in 1883. Other cities tried exhibition games at night, but because of poor equipment, nocturnal baseball did not take a strong hold until after 1930.

Augusta Nine Conquers Adelphi Academy, 3-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fort Defiance, Va., April 1.—Adelphi Academy's baseball team was defeated by the Augusta Military Academy nine here this afternoon, 3-2.

The Brooklyn boys got two runs in the first inning on Henry Revoire's single, Dick Classon's double and an error by the Augusta shortstop, Woodie Foreman, which allowed Revoire and Classon to score. The Cadets bunched four hits in the fourth frame and, assisted by an error, scored three runs to put away the game.

Fairmont Wins Title.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philippi, W. Va., April 1.—Fairmont won the State Baptist Young People's Union basket ball tournament, sponsored by Aldreson-Broaddus College here, defeating Monongah in the final game, 40 to 29. In the consolation, West Union defeated Belington, 41 to 32.

Hoyas to Meet Dartmouth's Nine Today

Ed Hargaden Will Pitch in Opener; Batting Order Is Undecided.

WITH all the finality of a window washer removing a smudge with one sweeping motion of his damp rag, yesterday's rain prevented George Washington and Dartmouth from opening the District's spring sports program with their ball game. But the Indians will have another opportunity to display their wares this afternoon when they stack up against Georgetown at 3:30 o'clock at the Hilltop.

Dartmouth will use the same team that was to have opposed George Washington yesterday. P. Clark will be in right field; Barrett, second base; Casey, center field; W. Clark, catcher; Hart, left field; Ray, third base; Ratajczak, shortstop; Comaten, first base, and Olsen, pitcher.

Maryland will play a practice game this afternoon in preparation for tomorrow's opener with Cornell at College Park. Coach Burt Shipley has not announced his starting pitcher, but in all probability it will be Steve Physioc. Shipley's line-up, named Saturday, remains the same and the team that goes into action tomorrow should be one of the best ever to fly the Black and Gold.

6,000 Cedars to Serve As Jumps in Cup Race

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 1.—Approximately 6,000 cedar trees have been purchased to serve as brush jumps on the Broadview Course of the Virginia Gold Cup Race, near here. The course, constructed under the supervision of George Cutting and William B. Streett, of the race committee, is fast being placed in shape and when completed will be the equal of any course in the country.

Dazzy Vance Will Get Chance With Dodgers

Orlando, Fla. April 1 (AP).—Dazzy Vance, who was released by the St. Louis Cardinals last week, will be given a chance to land a berth on the Brooklyn Dodgers' pitching staff, Manager Casey Stengel said today.

Stengel has invited Vance to work out with the Dodgers and the old dazzler is expected to arrive tomorrow and start his trial. The Brooklyn manager said Vance had not yet signed a contract.

League at Clarksburg To Name New Officers

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 1.—New officers will be elected at an annual meeting of the Clarksburg Industrial Athletic League tomorrow night at a local hotel, and the number of membership teams, now six, may be increased to eight, according to Harvey Williams, secretary-treasurer.

The league program includes baseball and basket ball. It is expected the baseball season will be extended to 10 weeks this year.

Gaithersburg High Cards 13 Contest

35 Boys Report for Work; Smith Leading Hurler.

Encouraged by the return of a veteran nine among the 35 candidates and the completion of an attractive 13-game schedule, Coach Harry Bertschy, of Gaithersburg High School, is anxious to christen the new high school field with a county title team.

Wilson Smith, the ambidextrous hurler who won games last year both right and left-handed, is counted upon by Bertschy to take the burden of the mound staff. Smith will be supported by Hammon and Perrell. Hardy will aid in the box when not in center field.

Linthicum, slugging second sacker, returns to the clean-up post, and Bumbacher and Devilbliss complete the outfield. The remainder of the infield is indefinite. Kelly will do the catching.

The schedule:

Fort Humphreys Will Play Celtics

Old Barracks Nine Busy Drilling for Game.

Fort Humphreys baseball team, the old Washington Barracks aggregation, marches off to the baseball wars Sunday when it invades Alexandria for a tussle with St. Mary's Celtics at Baggett's Stadium. The doughboys expect to have a fast team this year and are booking any and all comers.

Lieut. Noah M. Brinson, star athlete at West Point a few years ago, and Manager Joe Carter are whipping the team into shape for its opening engagement.

The pair expect to have a strong pitching staff built around the veterans, Tolley and Kafkra, and George McGuen, a southpaw recently assigned to the fort. There is an abundance of material available for the other posts.

Games may be arranged by calling Lieut. Brinson at NAtional 8772.

League to Organize.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 1.—An organization meeting of the Harrison County Speedball League will be held here next Sunday afternoon. The season's schedule will be prepared.

Lenehan's 71 Tops Field at Pinehurst

Providence, R. I., Amateur Is Seen as Title Threat; Dunlap Has 74.

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 1.—Ray Lenehan, of Providence, R. I., led a field of 85 through the qualifying round of the thirty-fifth North and South Amateur Golf championship today with a par 71 and established himself as a dangerous threat to the title held by George T. Dunlap, jr., former amateur champion.

Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., was runner-up for the medal with a 72. Dunlap, just recovering from an attack of influenza, played easily and qualified with a 74.

Scores of 81 or better were needed to get into the circle of 32 who will start match play tomorrow. Eight tied at 82 and will play off for four places.

None of the Washington, D. C., entrants of the tournament broke 80. Dick Davidson, of Chevy Chase, scored a 40, 40—80, and Dick Lunn, also of Chevy Chase, a former District champion, shot a 42, 39—81. Bob Stead, jr., of Chevy Chase, did not turn in a card.

Frank Allen, Washington Metropolitan Prep School champion last year, who recently left Georgetown University, turned in a 77, with a sub-par 35 on the homecoming nine.

Keyser Knights Annex Crown in Wild Battle

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Keyser, W. Va., April 1.—Forging to the front in the second extra period of one of the most spectacular basket ball games ever staged here, Coach Shaffer's Keyser Golden Knights defeated the Westvaco A. A. quint, 55 to 51, to win the Interstate League championship in the fifth and deciding game of the title series.

A sensational back court shot by William Miers a few seconds before the end of the period tied the score at 47-all and made another extra five minutes necessary.

Courses Added For '35 Open Qualifying

25 Sites, Instead of 23, Listed; Suburban Is on Selection.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 1.—In order to relieve some of the pressure in exceptionally large fields in certain sections, the United States Golf Association today announced the apportionment of 25 sectional qualifying districts for the 1935 National Open championship—an increase of 3 over last year's total.

The sections added are Madison, Wis.; Greensboro, N. C., and Jacksonville, Fla. There and at 22 other points, two 18-hole test rounds will be played May 13 with an anticipated entry of more than 1,000 players battling for 116 places in the championship proper. It will be played at Oakmont, Pa., nearby Pittsburgh, starting June 6.

Widening of the scope of qualifying rounds in the Middle West and South resulted from large entries in those sections last year when the country-wide field exceeded 1,000.

Madison was established in the Midwest as a separate qualifying center because last year 29 out of 158 entrants in the Chicago district were from Wisconsin. Greensboro was instituted to accommodate contestants from the Carolinas and southern Virginia, while Jacksonville is designed to take care of Florida and that part of the South not served by Atlanta and Nashville.

The complete list of qualifying districts and the courses where the test rounds will be played follow:

Boston, Rhode Island Country Club, West Barrington, R. I.; New York, Baltusrol Golf Club, Short Hills, N. J.; Philadelphia, Torresdale-Frankford Country Club; Baltimore, Suburban Club of Baltimore County, Pikesville, Md.; Pittsburgh, Oakmont; Buffalo, South Shore Country Club, Hamburg, N. Y.; Cleveland, Acacia Country Club, South Euclid, Ohio; Cincinnati, Camargo Club, Madeira, Ohio; Detroit, Country Club of Detroit; Chicago, Medinah Country Club; Madison, Maple Bluff Golf Club; St. Paul, Town and Country Club; Omaha, Omaha Field Club; Kansas City, Milburn Golf and Country Club; St. Louis, Normandy Hills Country Club, Normandy, Mo.; Nashville, Belle Meade Country Club; Greensboro, Sedgefield Country Club; Atlanta, East Lake Country Club (No. 1 course); Jacksonville, Ponte Verde Country Club; Dallas, Brook Hollow Golf Club; Tulsa, The Country Club; Denver, Country Club; Seattle, Seattle Golf Club; San Francisco, Orinda Country Club, Orinda, Calif.; Los Angeles, Riviera Country Club, Pacific Palisades, Calif.

The number of qualifiers for each district will not be determined until after the entries close April 24. The field for the 72-hole championship will comprise 150 players, but only 116 berths at the most will be available in the qualifying rounds since 34 places have been reserved for the exempted 30 low scorers and ties in the 1934 title tournament.

The qualifying quota may be still further reduced by additional exemptions in the event there are any foreign professionals in the country desirous of playing in the championship. Six Japanese pros, who will invade the United States under the auspices of the Professional Golfers Association, are expected to compete.

The burley Stanford University star will team with Jones in the two-ball foursomes scheduled Wednesday, probably meeting Jimmy Thomson and Olin Dutra, the current United States Open king.

Other practice rounds today included sub-par 70s for Craig Wood and Walter Hagen, 71 for John Golden, 72 for Abe Espinosa and 75 for Bill Burke.

Stocks Advance Led by Rails; Trading Light

Norfolk & Western Up 2½; Coca Cola Reaches New High at 202.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 1.—The rails put up some steam in today's stock market and gave the general equities list a moderate push toward recovery.

Week-end study of the Interstate Commerce Commission's rate ruling, which may expand the revenues of those roads participating by some $85,000,000 during the emergency period involved, tended to revive hopes among transportation observers that many of the carriers will be able to emerge in a healthier condition.

Although the majority of rail stocks did not finish at their tops of the day, they at least ended with the best net advances of the session. The thinness of the market, as a whole, was exemplified by the fact that scattered industrials, specialties and usually inactive issues stepped up substantially on quite small volumes.

The Associated Press average for 60 selected stocks retained an advance of 0.3 of a point at 36.6. The composite for 20 rails was up 0.6, that for 20 industrials improved 0.2 and the average for 20 utilities was unchanged. Transfers totaled 444,890 shares.

Among the rail shares Norfolk & Western finished up 2½ points at 163½. Others in this category were up small fractions to around a point. Coca Cola held a gain of ¼ point at 202, a new closing high. National Biscuit lost 1⅛ at 33½ as settlement of the company's strike was still delayed.

Crop Estimates Depress Wheat

Cotton Nervous, Closing at Net Decline of From 2 to 11 Points.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 1.—Prospective moisture in Kansas and Nebraska, together with somewhat enlarged 1935 crop estimates for the country as a whole, led to lower wheat prices today.

An authoritative unofficial summary figured the United States winter wheat crop this season, based on April 1 condition, as promising 470,000,000 bushels, compared with 466,000,000 bushels harvested last year. A feature of trade was considerable selling of wheat against simultaneous buying of corn.

Wheat closed easy, ⅝ to 1⅛ under Saturday's finish, May 94¾ to 94⅞, corn ⅜ off to ⅝ up, May 80½ to 80⅝, oats unchanged to ¼ lower, and provisions varying from 15 cents decline to 5 cents advance.

Contributing to the bearish trend of wheat values was prevailing uncertainty over foreign political and monetary affairs and as to proposed Washington legislative measures affecting grain exchange operations. Selling which resulted, although not heavy, was effective in causing a maximum setback of 1⅛ cents a bushel for wheat.

A steadying factor was that domestic stocks of wheat in farmers' hands at present are estimated at but 75,000,000 bushels, against 116,000,000 bushels a year ago.

Corn and oats, although influenced at times by wheat weakness, displayed stubborn resistance later owing largely to decreases in Chicago stocks of corn, with virtually no corn offered from the country. Provisions averaged lower, affected by downturns of prices for cotton and cottonseed oil.

Railroad Earnings Exaggerated by Inadequate Outlays for Maintenance; Reorganizations Needed Despite New Rate Rise Decision.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 1.—The great stress laid upon inadequate railroad maintenance in the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision granting a part of the freight rate increases sought by the carriers is one of the most significant aspects of this latest major rate case.

The commission clearly stated that, in granting the increase, the chief consideration was "not profit for railroad owners, but rather enhancing railroad earnings sufficiently to cover rising operating expenses and taxes and particularly to enable the railroads to maintain their plant in a condition to enable them to handle a volume of traffic which has been increasing somewhat with business recovery." In point of fact, the increase of some $85,000,000 in freight collections that the decision will yield, as a maximum, will just about offset the 5 per cent increase in railroad wages that goes into effect today. Hence, if the commission had not granted the rate rise, many of the carriers would have had to seek immediately for new means of cutting down expenditures in order to avoid a further contraction in railway operating income.

The decision of the commission stressed the fact that the physical condition of the railways has deteriorated greatly during the depression. This fact in itself is serious enough. It calls attention also to the fact that railway earnings have been overstated in recent years to the extent that expenditures for maintenance of way and structures and maintenance of equipment have been abnormally curtailed. In fact, if the railroads used the same principles of accounting that the general run of industrial and utility enterprises have adopted, their earnings showing during the depression would have been considerably worse.

While other enterprises make more or less regular deductions from earnings on account of the depreciation of their physical property, the railroad companies make but moderate deductions for depreciation, and that almost entirely on rolling stock. Instead of depreciation accounts, the railroads deduct from earnings the money actually expended to repair and replace units of railway property through the year, and such expenditures constitute the bulk of the maintenance accounts. Hence, when worn-out property is not replaced, earnings tend to be overstated correspondingly.

Maintenance Cut Has Been Altogether Excessive.

It is one of the axioms of railway operation that maintenance expenditures can not be reduced proportionately with a decline in traffic. Prof. William Z. Ripley has said that at best maintenance expenditures can be reduced about 50 per cent as much as traffic declines, within a given period. But since 1929 maintenance of way and structures outlays for the railroads as a whole have dropped by more than 60 per cent, while maintenance of equipment expenditures have fallen by more than 50 per cent, whereas the volume of traffic is down by less than 40 per cent. In other words, in the effort to maintain their earnings, the railroads have cut maintenance more than proportionately with the fall in traffic.

The railroads of the country, even to make the relatively poor earnings showing of the past three years, have thus been "living off their capital" to a large extent. Having a smaller volume of traffic, they have found themselves with a temporary surplus of facilities, and they have been utilizing this surplus so as to avoid property replacements as far as possible.

Even if traffic does not increase, maintenance expenditures will soon have to be expanded. Obviously, there is a limit to the continued use of the same rolling stock, the same rails, the same ties and the other units of railway property which have not been replaced as they have been worn out in recent years. As maintenance outlays increase, earnings will be contracted accordingly. Should a material rise in traffic occur, both maintenance and new capital expenditures on a substantial scale will be needed to enable the carriers to meet such increased demands on their facilities.

Drastic Reorganizations Remain Inevitable.

In the face of this situation, a rate rise of some $85,000,000, such as the commission has granted the railroads for the next 18 months, contributes nothing at all to any real solution of the railroads' problem. As long as a major rise in traffic is not forthcoming, a number of drastic financial reorganizations must be expected. These will reduce fixed charges sharply for a number of roads and give some relief to carriers that now find they can not earn enough to pay their bond interest even after skimping on maintenance to the greatest possible extent.

Even such financial reorganizations, however, will fail to solve the problem for many lines, for even then many lines will have to hold down maintenance expenditures unduly to show any operating earnings at all. If the present volume of traffic continues, therefore, the need will grow for more drastic measures to reduce railroad costs, such as wage reductions, co-ordination of facilities to reduce wage and other outlays and equalization of regulation of railroads and other types of transportation to discourage diversion of traffic. No progress is evident at the moment toward achieving these more basic solutions of the railway problem.

Stocks—Rail strength boosted a number of issues in a quiet session. Norfolk & Western gained 2¼, while Coca Cola reached a new high of 202. Sales for the day were 444,890 shares.

Bonds—Secondary rails improved considerably, boosting other corporates. Some rails gained as much as 3 points. Federals and foreign issues were firm. Transfers were up to $10,935,000.

Curb—Metals and specialties led in a modest upturn. Newmont and Dow Chemical both registered slight gains. Sales were off to 76,000 shares.

Grains—Moisture hopes for Kansas and Nebraska, together with hopes for larger 1935 crop than had been expected, led to lower prices. May wheat closed at 94¾ and May corn at 80½.

Cotton—Nervous and irregular fluctuations led to early declines. Closes were partially recovered at net declines of 9 to 11 points. May cotton closed at 11.00.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 3.15, while refined closed at 4.90.

Coffee—Rio, No. 7, closed at 7½, strong, while Santos, No. 4, sold last at 9 to 9¼.

John C. White New Plant Head Of C. & P. Tel. Co.

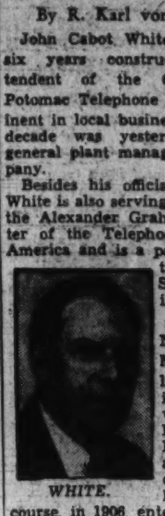
By R. Karl von Lewinski.

John Cabot White, for the past six years construction superintendent of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. and prominent in local business circles for a decade was yesterday appointed general plant manager of the company.

Besides his official position, Mr. White is also serving as president of the Alexander Graham Bell Chapter of the Telephone Pioneers of America and is a past president of the Telephone Society of Washington.



WHITE.

A native of New England, Mr. White has lived in Washington since he was 7 years old. He attended the District schools and shortly after completing his high school course, in 1906, entered the employ of the telephone company. From his first position as wire chief's clerk he rose steadily, being elevated to wire chief in 1916.

War and Navy Wire Chief.

When the United States entered the World War, Mr. White was placed in charge of communications for the State, War and Navy Departments. In 1920 he was named District wire chief and in 1927 he was promoted to installation supervisor.

Although he started to work at the close of his high-school days, Mr. White attended night school and won both his bachelor's and master's degree from the National University Law School.

He is past chancellor of the Alpha Chapter, Sigma Nu Phi Legal Fraternity and a past master of the Benjamin B. French Lodge of Masons.

Business Notes.

R. C. Morse, former general manager of the New York zone of the Pennsylvania Railroad, has been appointed acting vice president of the Eastern region of the Pennsylvania Railroad effective April 1. He takes the position heretofore occupied by C. S. Krick, who has been granted a leave of absence because of ill health.

The Women's Committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will hold a fashion show at the Raleigh Hotel, Wednesday evening, April 10. In addition to the display of latest fashions, there will be fortune telling, bingo, prizes and refreshments. No men will be allowed anywhere near the party.

Lincoln Service, Inc., Expands.

Addition of two subsidiary companies to the Lincoln Service Corporation, industrial bankers, in the near future, was announced yesterday by President Charles Delmar.

Opening of the new offices will raise the company's operating units to six, and was made necessary, Delmar explained, by the rapidly expanding volume of business in recent months.

In the first quarter of 1935, the Lincoln Service Corporation and its subsidiary companies reported a business increase of 56.3 per cent over the corresponding 1934 period. Collections for the first quarter were 96.6 per cent of par.

Volume of business during March was the second highest of any month in the company's operating history. Two of the units, Takoma Industrial Bankers and Dealers Credit, Inc., reported all time peaks during the month.

Recovery Needs Good Harvests

1934 Crop Curtailment Regarded as Handicap to Rise This Year.

New York, April 1.—The curtailment of crop yields last year is one of the major reasons why the United States will not recover from the depression in 1935, according to the Business Conditions Weekly of the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Just as a reduction in factory output spells depression so also does a curtailment of agricultural production spell depression.

On the basis of the 1934 harvests it may be estimated that the quantity of farm products marketed in 1935 will show a decrease of about 33 per cent from the predepression volume in 1929. Good harvests in 1935 are essential to any marked economic improvement in 1936.

At the present time the outlook for good harvests this year is not propitious. While it is reported that the farmers will plant a larger acreage this year than last, it is estimated that the acreage harvested will be less than the predepression area even though normal growing conditions prevail.

Greater Acreage Expected.

Under such conditions, it is anticipated that the harvested acreage of 18 important crops will amount to 286,000,000 acres in 1935, as compared with 244,000,000 acres in 1934 and with 302,000,000 acres in 1932, when the acreage was approximately equal to the predepression area.

The restriction of acreage this year means the need of exceptionally fine growing conditions for the production of bumper crop. Conditions at the present time, however, are not promising. There is a serious shortage of subsoil moisture and a lack of rain. This condition has resulted in bad dust storms which have caused additional damage. The seriousness of the situation has been recognized by the Government, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has recently removed all restrictions on the planting of spring wheat in an attempt to alleviate the situation.

Metals Strong In Curb Session

Aluminum, Newmont and Dow Chemical Are Up a Point Each.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 1.—Metals and specialties led the curb market in a modest upturn today.

Newmont Mining, Dow Chemical & Aluminum Co of America gained around a point each. Fractional improvement appeared in Lake Shore, International Petroleum and Swift & Co., while American Cyanamid "B" and Swift Internacional were a shade lower. A. O. Smith yielded slightly more than a point.

Transfers approximated 76,000 shares, compared with 90,000 last Friday.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, April 1 (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—The wool market in Boston was a little slower than a week ago, but quotations were fairly firm and unchanged compared with the close of last week. Reports from foreign markets were somewhat irregular, according to cables to private concerns in Boston. European continental markets were reported unsettled, but at the same time cables from Australia indicated that prices there were very firm. Superior combing 64s 70s Australian wools were quoted for import into this country at as high as 78 to 80 cents scoured basis, duty paid, landed Boston.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

RADIO editors often feel they must stifle any enthusiasm, but this writer is pepped up over three particular programs, and is all set to rave about them.

In the first place, Godfrey's amateur show last Saturday was something for which WJSV should be justly proud. It was smooth, amusing and delicately handled. The acts weren't at all bad—the winner, one Irvin Hackerman, a youth of 20 years, has a naturally nice voice, no dramatics and no affectations. He has a nice manner, just walks up to the mike, thrusts a hand in a pocket and sings. If he was nervous he didn't show it.

Hackerman is a student at George Washington University, has taken part in several school plays, has written songs. His victory entitles him to appear on next Thursday's last show, around 9 p. m., at the Fox Theater. He is eligible for the final contest, the winner of which gets a full week at the Fox with professional salary.

The second burst of enthusiasm is about Will Rogers, back on the Gulf show Sundays at 7:30 p. m. There's something about Will's slant on things that is so sanely humorous, so completely friendly, that in these times of national and international problems Will is a relief. Says he, while his head was turned there was a dust storm and the farmers who went out to look down at crops had to look up at them, and England went over to talk to Germany, and Hitler talked all the time in German, and the Englishmen went home not knowing what it was all about. And so on, with a giggle at every comma, and an impulse to applaud at the end.

Thirdly, we take off our hats to Maj. Bowes. He manages to keep his hour alive with human interest, worn-out as the expression may be. Sunday's act, while not spectacular, was interesting, what with Irish bagpipes, Swiss hand bells, a little Russian lady 110 years old who studied piano with Franz Liszt; a boy who hitch-hiked to have his chance, another whose success depended upon his wife's Easter bonnet—well, it was a good show.

Incidentally, there is a funny sequel to the major's gong. Fox's Carter Barron has been discovered snooping around the patent offices and muttering under his breath, "They've got to stop kicking our going around." Seews Loew's owns WHN, where the gong idea started, and WHN isn't going to let its gong be copied without a credit line. The world is welcome to the amateur idea, but the gong belongs to the station. Can it be copyrighted, patented, registered or trade-marked? Carter Barron wants to know. He's having a record made of the sound (the gong is only a sheet of gunmetal) and that will give him something to work on.

OUTSTANDING features on today's air

An "interview" with Hans Christian Anderson and dramatization of "The Ugly Duckling," celebrating anniversary of the writer's birth, WMAL, 6 p. m.

"Life of Mary Marlin," dramatic serial, starts on WJSV, 11:15 a. m. A good show, with a melodramatic undercurrent, experienced acting and well-written script.

Vatican City papal choirs, from Rome, WJSV, 3 p. m., is a program of sixteenth century compositions.

"Red Trails" changes its time to 9 p. m. Tuesdays instead of Thursdays, 8:30 p. m., effective today.

Prominent speakers in Jerusalem, London and New York are heard in the tenth anniversary celebration of dedication of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem on WMAL, 9:30 p. m.

Beauty Box Theater celebrates its first anniversary with Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance." WMAL 10 p. m.

C. Marshal Finnan, of the National Capital Parks, speaks on "The Story Behind the Care of the Cherry Blossoms," 6 p. m. WMAL.

A NEW series of programs by prominent British thinkers starts on WABC-Columbia network today, 5 p. m. It was arranged by the British Broadcasting Co. and will be heard throughout the empire as well as in this country. Today's broadcast brings Sir Ernest J. P. Benn, one of Britain's foremost publishers. He is also a writer, editor and politician.

Other celebrities scheduled for this series: George Bernard Shaw, G. K. Chesterton, Wyndham Lewis and Hon. Herbert S. Morrison, regarded as a prospective Labor prime minister of Great Britain.

Luckily, this series is heard locally, on WJSV.

Bell Resigns as Welfare Head.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., April 1.—W. J. D. Bell has tendered his resignation as president of the Family Welfare Society here and the vacancy will be filled by the board at its April meeting. The organization was formerly known as the Associated Charities.

Cynical, outspoken men (oh, yes, there are a few left) will tell you there's no place like home . . . for a woman to stay! But the ladies, God bless 'em, think differently. They began by running us men out of the barber shops, and now they've gone into business, politics, sociology, law and the arts with a vengeance. Their success makes mere males turn green with envy, for the hand that used to rock the cradle is now making so much money ruling the world that its owner can hire cradle-rockers.

How did these famous women get that way? We men are curious, and there are thousands of women who would appreciate a few tips. What brought fame to Mrs. Piechart, the statistician? To what does Madame la Scribble, the novelist, attribute her success? How did Miss Brainstorm become a celebrated psychologist?

Four bright young women of The Post's staff . . . Virginia Lee Warren, Hope Ridings Miller, Elizabeth Young and Frances Mangum . . . can answer those questions for you. Their interviews with women renowned in the scientific, theatrical, business and social worlds are featured on The Post's women's pages each day.

Once upon a time, whenever a woman lawyer or doctor, or any woman who had become successful in her chosen field, was to be interviewed, the City Editor collared a protesting police reporter or rewrite man from the local room and sent him out. The resulting interview was always terrible, because no man knows how to put questions to a woman. Women do it much better . . . you know how the ladies can size up each other!

There are many successful women in Washington: writers, business women, social workers, scientists, economists. Their experiences are interesting, their opinions are thought-provoking, their personalities are outstanding. Interviews with these women, written by intelligent reporters, are almost required reading. If you haven't been following them each day in The Post, you've been missing something.

If you're a man, you'll be surprised to discover how women find success. If you're a woman, you'll learn how other women really made good on their threats to leave the dishes in the sink and start a tea room, or an interior decorating show, or run for Congress.

These interviews, each one different, each one important, each one interesting, will be found on the woman's pages of

Washington Among Cities Where Survey Notes Construction 'Boom.'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 1.—A jump of more than 90 per cent in privately financed building operations in the South during the first quarter of 1935, with an estimated total outlay of $14,288,000, was reported today by the Manufacturers Record.

During the first three months of 1934, awards for this type of construction totaled only $7,508,000.

Residential construction this year, particularly, the publication declared, has shown a marked increase with awards amounting to $8,069,000 as compared with $4,782,000 for the first three months of last year.

"Building booms" were described as under way in Miami, Fla., Miami Beach, Fla., and Washington, D. C.

Awards for industrial plants of a variety of types from Maryland to Texas totaled $20,948,000 for the first 1935 quarter in comparison with $13,661,000 for the same period last year.

The Manufacturers Record said "chemical industries head the forward movement just as they have for several years past. So much so that it is apparent the South is steadily becoming the center of the chemical industry."

General building, however, showed an approximate 22 per cent drop below the first quarter of 1934. The total this year has been $110,566,000. The decrease was attributed to "a sharp decline in public building construction and in road and bridge work."

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 1.—Firmness in gilt-edged securities was stimulated by good revenue figures together with dividend and interest payments of over £31,000,000. Home rails were quiet, while German bonds remained steady after early firmness. French bonds were cheerful on the better exchange situation, and gold mining shares held firm. Transatlantic issues and home industrials were irregular, while rubber and oil shares held steady. The market closed quiet.

Paris—After a strong opening a weak tone prevailed on the bourse today due to the month-end liquidation. Rentes improved on the likelihood that Parliament would adjourn tomorrow for the Easter vacation. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—A slight upward trend in stocks caused veiled improvement on the boerse today. The closing was firm.

The Dollar Abroad.

LONDON, April 1 (AP).—The United States dollar lost ½ cent to the pound, closing at 4.79⅞ to the pound as compared to Saturday's close of 4.79¾. The opening was at 4.79¾. The French franc closed at 72.78 to the pound as compared to Saturday's close of 72.78.

PARIS—The United States dollar lost 2 centimes today, closing at 15.185 francs (6.594 cents) to the franc, as compared with Saturday's close of 15.183 francs (6.585 cents). The opening was at 15.175 francs (6.589 cents).

BERLIN—The United States dollar sold today at 2.493 marks (40.11 cents to the mark), unchanged from Saturday's quotation.

As Long as People Dance ...This Man Makes Money

Clear back in 1639, philosophic George Herbert said "He who dances must pay the piper."

Today, they pay the accordionist, the saxophonist, the drummer, the clarinet, the man behind the cornet, and all the rest of the group who furnish the music.

And They Pay Them Well!

There's profit and pleasure in music! Learn it! Start today! You can buy the instrument you favor at Homer L. Kitts, Washington's Premier Musical House, together with 55 private lessons for $1.50 weekly—and in a little time you can become proficient enough to make music a vocation—or an avocation.

HE'S INTERESTING AND...
WELL SWEETHEART, EVERYBODY TO THEIR OWN TASTE, BUT BEFORE I'D HOLD HANDS WITH A MAN I HAD MET ONLY A FEW DAYS AGO...
OH HE JUST HAPPENED TO GRAB MY HAND AS YOU STEPPED OUT ON... OH I FORGOT... THIS RING!
A WHAT? HEAVENLY DAYS! SUCH A BIG DIAMOND! OH PEGGY, DON'T TELL ME YOU ACCEPTED THAT FROM...?
HE PUT IT ON MY HAND JUST AS YOU CALLED TO ME, AND I FORGOT ABOUT IT UNTIL NOW.
HE SAID HE HAS JUST OODLES OF JEWELS. RUBIES, DIAMONDS, PEARLS. AN ISN'T IT LOVELY? LOOK!
OH HONEY, ISN'T OUR SITUATION... MAROONED ON THIS ISLAND... BAD ENOUGH WITHOUT YOU ACCEPTING RINGS FROM A MAN WHO I KNOW ISN'T TELLING THE TRUTH ABOUT MY MISSING BROTHER, CHES?

Object—Not Matrimony

By Lillian Barker

On her eighteenth birthday, Katrina Harman, an orphan just out of boarding school, spent a young fortune on clothes to impress a wealthy young bachelor named Tazewell. He took her dancing, expressed his love but indicated that he had no intention of marrying anyone. Katrina was bitterly disappointed and determined to see him no more. Returning to the home of the friend, Elena, where she was staying, Katrina received a wire from her aunt saying all her money had been lost in investments made by an unscrupulous attorney. And her new wardrobe is not even paid for. Taz offers to loan her the money; she insists on giving him her I. O. U. Next day, when a letter from her aunt gives her the details of the crash, she is terrified, for she is penniless, has no way of earning a living and refuses to be dependent on friends.

IF NOT back in the promised "second," it was only a few minutes before Elena returned with her mother, a petite, girlish-looking brunette in flowing yellow georgette negligee.

"I've just been telling Connie of the tragic thing that's happened to you, Katrina," she began, "and she's come along to help me persuade you to live with us—that is, if you haven't already done what I told you, made up your mind to stay on without any more talking and begging. Have you?"

"I'm—I'm awfully sorry, Ellie," Katrina's words came with embarrassing slowness, "but I just don't see how I can stay. I am overcome with your kindness and generosity, my dear. That you must know, and yet——"

"Now, now, no excuse. I won't listen to 'em," Elena threatened. "I have my heart set on your living with us and you've just got to do it. Situated as she is, it's the only thing for her to do, isn't it, Connie?"

Connie Urged Too.

Constance Holt, whose hair was short, black, bobbed and "permanently waved" and whose face, thanks to massage, was almost as free from betraying age-lines as that of her 19-year-old daughter, drew up a chair beside the bed, laid a maternally caressing hand on Trina's forehead and said:

"Elena is right, child. There is only one thing for you to do—remain where you are, here with us." Connie looked about, at the rosewood bed with its turquoise silk canopy, at the triple-mirrored dressing table and the chairs in rosewood, also, at the ivory-tinted walls and the French prints hanging on them; then down at the rug with its pastel colors all harmoniously and Orientally blended and said: "This will be your room. Could you want anything prettier?"

Hard to Resist.

"I should say not. I never saw a lovelier bedroom, but, Mrs. Holt, I simply can't impose on you. Both you and Ellie are the sweetest things. You don't seem quite to understand my position, however, either of you. And no wonder, it's so difficult and delicate."

"Even so, we do understand it," Elena maintained, again curling up on the foot of the bed. "What's more, we realize you're as proud as Lucifer. But that's just plain silly. Trina, being proud with us. We're all crazy about you, dad and mother and I. Isn't that true, Connie?"

"Of course. We don't want you to feel like an outsider, either, Katrina, but precisely as if you were one of us, one of the family. Elena's never had a good friend we all loved so much and, in the present circumstances, I repeat, the place for you is here. Why where else would you go, child? Ellie just told me you'd decided not to go to New Orleans."

A Brave Child.

"I have. My relatives—and they're the only close relatives I have—will do well to make ends meet without me. So I'll just rent a furnished room and earn my living in New York. I must be independent."

"You blessed, courageous child!" exclaimed Constance. "I certainly admire your pluck, but you aren't the sort of girl to get out on your own; to buck up against the world, a competitive business world where only the fittest and the most hard-boiled can hope to survive, especially in these trying times, in this unparalleled depression!"

"No matter what I was born to, and meant for" Katrina replied after moments of heavy silence, "my guardian's dishonesty and the subsequent bank crash together have changed everything for me. They've made me virtually a pauper. But poor as I am, I'd rather die than be a parasite. No, I must support myself, in one way or another."

She Was Untrained.

"You see you don't even know in what way," said Connie. "You have loads of character, Trina, but be reasonable; how can you possibly expect to earn your living?"

That same question again that Tazewell had asked.

"I'll—I'll have to decide," Katrina replied after another pause, "I didn't sleep well last night and this morning I feel sort of dizzy and can't seem to think straight. For the first time in my life I have a headache. I guess that telegram from Aunt Julia shot my nerves all to pieces."

"Naturally," put in Elena, smoothing out a wrinkle in one of the butterfly sleeves of her mother's neglige, "and, Connie, I forgot to tell you or rather, I didn't have time to tell you, but that telegram wasn't all. On top of the devastating news from Atlanta Trina had a lovers' quarrel with Taz."

A Lovers' Quarrel.

"Not really?" Constance looked toward Katrina, whose silence was sufficient verification. "I'm so, so sorry."

"I'm sorry, too," Elena went on. "Still," with a philosophic smile, "lovers' disputes are nothing to worry about. I speak from experience. All sweethearts disagree and argue now and then and afterward they' just kiss and make up and everything's hotsy-totsy. Isn't that so, Connie?"

"Often it is, almost always it is, I would say, if the sweethearts really love each other."

"Well, these sweethearts love each other all right, take it from me." Elena's tone couldn't have been more emphatic. "Now," looking toward her mother, "when was Taz Bronson ever so wild over a girl as he's been over Katrina ever since they first me here in our house last Easter? Lothario that he was before then, it surprised me the way he fell, for did he dose his head and concentrate all his affection on my little girl friend?"

Just a Mask.

And transferring her gaze to Trina, "and did you return that affection? As a day pupil only too glad to promote this romance, I guess I smuggled enough of Tazewell's 'billets doux' in to you at Mme. Jaquemart's to have the real low-down on the whole affair. I just never saw two young things harder hit, either—no kiddin'."

"First love," with the air of one exceedingly wise in such matters, "always strikes you like a cyclone."

"Oh ye-ah!" Katrina's nonchalant slanginess, assumed as a cover-up for her real feelings, and her trembling lips were a pathetic combination. If Elena only realized how she was torturing her!

"Oh ye-ah!" the "torturer" echoed. "Now," fanning away smoke, "I have no earthly idea what you and Taz squabbled about. That's none of my business. Nobody's business, really, except yours and his. All I'm interested in is bringing you two back together again, see, getting you reconciled." And turning to her mother, "Connie, I have a bright idea. I'm going to lunch with my soon-to-be husband at 12:30 and will date him then and either you or I can phone Tazewell in the meantime."

Dinner Planned.

Constance was all for the plan. "That is a bright idea, Ellie. You date Sid and I'll telephone Taz. I also have a luncheon engagement at the St. Hortiz. So I'll line up Katrina's boy friend before I go out."

"No, no, please don't, Mrs. Holt," Trina pleaded. "From the way my head is aching now I just won't be up to—to a dinner party."

"Sure, you feel rotten now. Who wouldn't?" Elena wanted to know. "But you're also hurt with Taz. That's the main reason you don't want Connie to phone him. I'm on to you, old thing; read you like a book. I know what you need to get back to yourself. A good long rest today, heaps of sleep, mind you, and by tonight you'll be fresh as a daisy."

More than ever was Trina determined to get away from that house. But how and when could she make her escape? Never in the world would these devoted pitying, persistent, matchmaking friends consent to her going. They were too bent on effecting a reconciliation between her and Tazewell Bronson.

The Chimerical Canon.

Occupying a prominent place in the arsenal of my esteemed adversary, Mr. Sims, is a glittering, fearsome and almost legendary device known as the Sims three bid. I say "almost legendary" because, although a lot of people have heard about it, few have actually seen it in action. This is not because it is deliberately kept in reserve, but because this awesome instrument, geared to microcromic precision, is unfortunately useful only for hands that are near the outermost bounds of mathematical probability.

We will, in he course of the present match, probably play 1,000 hands, and I am willing to wager that in all these hands neither Mr. nor Mrs. Sims will have what in their system would be a three bid. But if they should, I am willing to admit they will probably make the most of it.

East, Dealer.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	3♡(1)	Pass	4◇(2)
Pass	5◇(3)	Pass	6◇(4)
Pass	6♡(5)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—Calling for partner's highest ranking Ace.
2—The conventional response.
3—North's response has denied the Ace of spades. There is still a chance for the slam, however, if partner holds the King of diamonds. This bid asks for that information.
4—"Yes, sir; I have it."
5—Perfect.

There is no question about the efficacy of this three-bid on hands that are really two-bids with unusual distributions where information is wanted only about specific Aces or Kings needed to make a slam. The bid is also effective when the original bidder has a void suit and would have no use for high card strength in that suit because he could not reach partner's hand.

The Sims three bid is a forthright declaration of power in which no finesse is necessary, and variation from rigid procedure strictly "verboten." Its great weakness is the infrequency of its occurrence.

A strictly pre-emptive three bid is unduobtedly of greater value because the type of hand it indicates crops up every day.

Monotony.

I HEARD my friend complaining, "I am the luckless guy; whenever it is raining I've no umbrella nigh. Whenever bees are swarming they always roost on me; whenever it is storming the lightning hits my tree. If there's a brutal riot you'll always find me there, though I make peace and quiet the burden of my prayer. If some one throws a boulder, a dornick or a rock, it's sure to hit my shoulder and knock me half a block. You'll always see me fleeing when autos run amuck, and I'm always being run over by a truck. If some fierce dog is eager to chew a passing wight, my shinbones lank and meager, he's always sure to bite. If some big bridge collapses, some structure high in air, I'll be, without perhapses, the one who's crossing there. If there's a rude tornado, a cyclone or a flood, you'll see me in the shadow all plastered up with mud. You find me always turning for help to the police, and yet my heart is yearning for peace, for balmy peace. The fates that persecute me are prejudiced, I guess; I wish some gent would shoot me and end my dark distress." I said, "You should be merry, you ought to sing and smile; when circumstances vary they make this life worth while. Monotony's the adder that poisons human jays, and they grow sad and sadder through all their weary days. Adventures come to find you, armed with a 10-foot pole, and such things shouldn't grind you, but elevate your soul."
